Some of the dogs about town who were not familiar with the recent history of the world, and possibly some of the people, mistook the siren's doleful shriek, at 11 o'clock last Friday for an alarm of fire or something else equally dreadful. What it really meant was that three years before that hour the United States and her allies, at the urgent request of a beaten enemy, called off the dogs of war about three weeks too soon. And we have been congratulating ourselves over it ever since, and shall perhaps continue to do so for some years to come.

An exchange humorist says: "Our idea of wasted effort is a girl in a short skirt powdering her nose." Not wasted effort at all. Formerly the nose did not need any special effort to attract attention; now it does. Men are in danger of forgetting that a woman has a nose.

Modern inventions are turning the world topsy-turvy now. A submarine, down by San Diego, the other day, caught fire while it was under water, and they had to bring it up to put the fire out.

WILL IT LAST?

Some persons still express the fear that the reopening of the mills may be only for a short time. In making our own estimates on such matters, as those of us who are not in the councils of the lumber company must do, persons should not be governed by the apparent local conditions exclusively, but should give attention also to well known general conditions.

Expressions of opinion by those qualified to judge and the records of passing events, as seen in the press, all point to the conclusion that the next few years will show greater demand for lumber than has been seen for many years. There is a great demand for buildings of all classes, both for domestic and business purposes, in city and country, all over the United States. By reason of the war and conditions following it, the current demand has not been met. The shortage must be made up in the next few years, besides each year's new requirements.

In the race to supply this lack, it is not likely that the local lumber company will choose to stand aside and stay out of the running. That is not what it is supposed to be in business for.

WHICH?

The position of the Pacific Electric railway in Los Angeles is typical of the position in which electric interurban companies have been placed by auto freight and auto bus competition.

The Pacific Electric shows an accumulated deficit of $13,443,444. It faces three alternatives; it must increase its net revenues by raising rates, or by reducing expenses, or go into bankruptcy.

The Pacific Electric is largely responsible for suburban growth of Los Angeles. Its lines penetrated the new districts and furnished rapid and regular means of transportation. It has paid immense taxes and expended hundreds of thousands of dollars for street paving.

Would Los Angeles or any other city care to see its street railway tracks torn up and the traffic handled by motor busses using the streets paid for at public expense? This is a question which many cities are going to have to decide within a short time.

UNIVERSAL BUILDING MATERIAL

The last week's report of the West Coast Lumbermen's Ass'n. showed the best lumber business reported for many months, the cut being fourteen per cent above normal.

Forty-two percent of the new business was placed for cargo delivery, of which domestic orders totaled 20,583,223 feet, while export orders totaled 11,431,000 feet.

Productions for the week was 68,414,562 feet with total orders aggregating 76,444,223. Most noticeable is the continued heavy increase in movement of lumber by water.

Lumber is the great universal building material in this country. With wages returning to normal and lumber down to virtually a pre-war basis the long delayed home building movement is gradually making headway as other material and commodity prices drop.

There is enough small home building being done to employ all idle labor if it would consent or be permitted to work at wages and hours which the common citizen could meet. As this fact is realized more men begin to work as their own bosses and building activity increases.

MISCELLANEOUS OREGON MATTERS

Oregon now has more merchantable timber than any other state in the union. Lane county has more than any other county in Oregon. A few days ago, a writer well informed on these matters declared that the time seemed near at hand when Lane county would become the lumber producing center of the United States. When that time comes, its mills will have to be pretty nearly all in operation, and all have ready access to the markets of the country.

LOCAL PEOPLE STUDY EXTENSION COURSES

Examples of fine determination, of persistent study and preparation during spare hours are to be found in the residents of Springfield who are taking correspondence courses with the University of Oregon. They include: Russell C. Olson, registered for economic history of the United States; Anna B. Bidwell, for Europe since 1815; Donald W. McKinnon, for short story; Dell F. Hannon, for integral calculus; Forrest M. Hadsall, for commercial English; Orson L. Vaughan, for plane trigonometry; Ole I. Soleim, for entrance English compo-

In Society

The P. E. O. Sisterhood held its regular semi-monthly social meeting with Mrs. Dan Crites, Monday evening. As the membership of the chapter is composed of about 25 ladies of Eugene and five in Springfield, whenever the meeting is held with one of the Springfield members, the attendance is mostly from Eugene; as it was in this case.

An enjoyable afternoon was spent at the home of Mrs. Mark Peery Tuesday afternoon, when the Chrysanthemum club held its first meeting of the season. Officers were elected and plans were laid for the ensuing year. The house was beautifully decorated with choice chrysanthemums which also marked the places at the table.

Those present were: Mesdames, Frank A. De Pue, James E. Stewart, B. A. Washburne, Jas. A. Seavey, Kenneth Ables, Jas. L. Clark, J. J. Bryan, Helen Martin and the hostess.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Kenneth Ables, on November 23. The University through its extension division, offers 80 different courses in education; F. M. Roth, for seminar in education and secondary school methods; Joseph E. Torbet, for seminar in education; Creed V. Brattain, for accounting; Mrs. Elizabeth Page, for college English composition; and Chas. E. Lambert for methods in civics and educational psychology.

The residents of Springfield, who during the past year have taken such a variety of courses for cultural improvement and professional advancement, are part of a group of 1000 Oregon citizens who have taken advantages for home study offered by the University of Oregon.
