The News published a note some months ago to the effect that a gentleman well known in Springfield contemplated converting a convenient and suitable tract which he owns not far away into a summer resort for tourists, picnicers and others. Questioned about it lately, he declared that he felt a little dubious about the project. He does not exactly like the kind of winter or spring resort that some young people from Eugene have been trying to make of the place.

The naval limitations treaty was unanimously ratified by the senate Tuesday. Even the irreconcilables, who have seemed to make a merit of opposing about everything that the mass of the people of the country want done, made no opposition. While congress has had to deal with many things of exclusive home interest, that demanded immediate attention more urgently, it has not had to deal with anything else of so much importance as this for all time and for all people. The effect which this treaty promises to have, not only on the peace of the world but on the economic welfare of the civilized nations, our own as much as any other, cannot be measured. As an event to be hailed with joy, the signing of the armistice was as nothing to compare with it.

BONUS LIKELY TO WIN

The new soldiers' bonus bill, without any material change from its original form, passed the lower house of congress, last Thursday, by an overwhelming majority. The members were influenced, no doubt, by the manifest sentiment of the people of the country, expressed through the newspapers great and small, throughout the country, and in private, and showing strongly in the crowd in attendance at the time of the final vote.

This does not mean that all those who favored its passage regarded it as the best measure of relief that could be devised. But after the failure to pass a bill heretofore, the advocates of some kind of relief measure, the millions of veterans and other millions whose interests are linked with theirs, felt that this was the only measure in sight, and the only form of relief that had any prospect of being acted on for a long time to come. The utterances of the opponents of this measure impressed those who were vitally interested, but could only play the part of idle lookers-on, that a failure to pass this bill would mean indefinite delay, and either no relief at all, or, quite likely, after half a year of further delay, the passage of a measure that would not serve all the interests involved as well. The patience of the mass of the people was worn threadbare. The general attitude towards congress might be expressed in about these terms: "We want to know what you are going to do about this matter. Do the best that you can see the way to do now; but do something and do it quickly."

The chief arguments against this measure have all been made from the standpoint of the financier. It has been said that some of its features might not work well in practice; that they might disturb the financial system of the country, etc. The features above which these questions have been raised seem to be largely adjustable and optional and not likely to be dangerous in actual operation.

The citizens of the country, the service men as well as others, recognize that congress has some serious financial problems to deal with, growing out of the world war and the readjustments to be made since the war. But one thing they quite generally feel like insisting on is this: that this matter of the evening up of the compensation of the men who took the chances of war should, first and last, and all the way through, be counted as one of these great problems, and have its fair chance to be dealt with along with all the others, and not have to wait until all the others are settled.

The senate referred the bill to its finance committee. It had not at this writing been reported back to the senate. It may be held by the committee; it may be amended, and have to go back to the house; it may be delayed in many ways; it may not pass the senate. Secretary Mellon has been strongly opposed to it. President Harding is known to have favored another method of financing the relief. If the senate passes the bill by as much as a two-thirds vote, it does not seem likely that he will veto it, even if he does not altogether approve it.

TURKEY IN THE SADDLE

The prime ministers of Great Britain, France and Italy have formulated a proposal in the nature of a treaty supplemented to the treaty of Seures, to be presented to the government—we may say the two governments—of Turkey and the government of Greece. It defines the status of the Turkish government, the boundaries of Turkey, and would seem to settle, or rather unsettle the fate of the Armenian people. It gives Turkey a considerable portion of Thrace in Europe, including Constantinople, but not Adrianople. The Gallipoli peninsula is to be guarded by allied troops, to keep the strait

In Society

The Kensington club was very pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Harry Whitney last Friday. The hours passed too quickly—chatting over needle work. Mrs. Basford, Mrs. Neet and Mrs. Morgan favored the members with piano selections, which were very much enjoyed. Late in the afternoon, the hostess served a very delicious luncheon. At this time, Mrs. Whitney proudly displayed a brand-new set of hand painted china.

Members present were: Mesdames, Paul Basford, Fred Bressler, O. B. Kessey, Anna Knox, H. A. Korf, Jesse Lora, L. May, A. J. Morgan, J. T. Moore, Levi Neet, Eliza Sutton, John Edwards, Chas. Swarts, W. F. Walker, C. E. Wheaton, Miss Edna Swarts and the hostess. The guest of the afternoon was Mrs. Carl Olsen.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. A. J. Morgan, on April 7.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Snooks, on Tuesday evening, gave a birthday surprise party in honor of their daughter Pearl. The rooms were beautifully decorated in yellow daffodils and crepe paper. Following the music and dancing, an exquisite lunch was served.

The invited guests were: Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Eggmann, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Huntly, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Freeland, Mrs. L. K. Page, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Craft, Mr. and Mrs. Del Hinson, of Eugene; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Coffman, of Eugene; Miss Isabelle Hughes; Miss Francis Baker; Miss Lillian Baker; Miss Vera Kimball, of Lowell; Mr. Earl Lopley, Mr. Fred Lindsay; W. E. Howell and Frank Emerick of Waltherville.

of the Dardanelles open. Armenia is declared to be a part of Turkey. The language of the agreement seems to point to the establishment of the Armenians somewhere else, under guardianship of the League of Nations.

If the Armenians, after all that they have suffered at the hands of the Turks, are at last to be robbed of their country, chiefly to pacify the Mohammedans of the British dominions, the rest of the civilized world, which has had no part in the deal, will regard it as a crime. Turkey has for several generations maintained its place among the nations chiefly by playing one interest against another, among the western nations. It seems to be coming back to a large degree of strength again by the same means.

YOU ALWAYS HAVE TO PAY

Whether you get your business education at some regular institution, or through the school of experience and hard knocks, you have to pay for it. The latter is mighty expensive both as to time and money, often being at the sacrifice of health and happiness.

All the time that you are learning in this way you are working, under a great handicap, and often you have to pass up splendid opportunities because of the lack of the necessary business education.

Our school year is divided into four terms of three months each.

Spring, Summer, Autumn, Winter.

Invest in a two cent stamp, or buy a postal card; ask for our catalog; read it over and then—ENROLL.

The Pneumonia Month

March is a typical pneumonia month and usually gives a high rate of mortality for the disease. After a long and hard winter, the system loses much of its resistance and people grow careless. When every cold, no matter how slight, is given prompt and intelligent attention, there is much less danger of pneumonia. It should be borne in mind that pneumonia is a germ disease and breeds in the throat. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is an expectorant and cleans out the germ laden mucus and not only cures a cold but prevents its resulting in pneumonia. Children take it willingly.
