Only The Ray Battery Can Withstand These Terrific Tests

Test No. 1
Subjected to a dead short discharge, a Ray Battery gave off current for a period of twenty-five minutes without a single cell breaking down. Nine minutes of this test exhaust other batteries.

Test No. 2
The Ray Battery was given a dead short with its plates only half covered with electrolyte, then with plates only one quarter covered. When water was supplied, the battery instantly recovered its original voltage. Other batteries break down when run with dry plates.

Test No. 3
Supplying the sole motive power and working against the compression of the motor, a Ray drove a coupe .4 of a mile before coming to a stop. Given 1 minute to recuperate, it drove the car another .1 of a mile and repeated this distance a second and a third time with only one minute of rest intervening. Thorough examination after this test failed to reveal any bad effects in the Battery.

Ray Batteries withstand these trying tests because of their Lavier Formula plates. Because they withstand them, they are backed by the strongest guarantee ever put upon a battery—an absolute, unconditional guarantee for two years from the date put into service.
