INCIDENTS ATTENDING A VERY ORDINARY TRIP

There is nothing ordinarily very striking about a trip from here to Portland, in itself. It is the occasion of the trip that makes it worth noting, if it is worth it at all. The fact that a man makes a trip to town is not worth noting. There may happen to be some occasion for his trip that is worth noting. It is the occasion, not the trip itself, that is worth noting.

I left here for Portland Tuesday afternoon, May 23, to attend the district assembly of the North Pacific district of the Church of the Nazarine, which opened that evening, and closed Sunday evening. The church of the Nazarine had its beginning in Los Angeles in October 1895. It has now over 45,000 members. It is organized into about 40 districts, covering all of the United States, all of Canada west of Lake Superior, with one district in England and Scotland; and has missionary establishments in Mexico, Central and South America, Japan, China, India, South Africa and Southeastern Europe. The first district organization was the Northwest district, including Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana. After the eastern part of this territory was cut off, the remainder was again divided three years ago, the eastern half retaining the old name, and the territory west of the Cascades, from the northern line of California to the northern line of British Columbia, taking the name of the North Pacific district.

The Church of the Nazarine has at present three general superintendents. It had once, for a short time, four. It has had seven from first to last.

Dr. Roy T. Williams, the youngest of the three, who presided over this assembly, is perhaps the premier of them all as a preacher, a scholar and an administrator. Yet withal he is brotherly and companionable man, a man of the common people. He was president of a college in Texas when he was called to his present position by the death of the founder of the church, Dr. P. F. Breese.

The Nazarines have established a world's record for proportional contributions to the work of the church. Their contributions for the year 1921 amounted to over $56 per member, a total of nearly two and a half millions. The lodging and meals of the members of this assembly, with some others entitled to attend, 150 or more in all, was borne by the people of the four Portland Nazarine churches and their friends without a cent of cost to those who attended except what voluntary contributions they might choose to make.

I was lodged in a room on the 7th floor of the Y. M. C. A. building. For this I was indebted to an elderly lady who does chambermaid work in that building. I had a camp meeting acquaintance with her and her husband for a number of years. On inquiry of the secretary, I found her at her work and made my acknowledgements to her.

The day after I went I met Mrs. E. C. Shay, now of Cottage Grove, on the street near our church. She was in Portland in attendance upon her daughter Marjorie, who has been afflicted with some kind of nasal trouble ever since I have known the family. Marjorie had been obliged to give up her school work, and is taking treatments in Portland. Her mother thinks she has a prospect of being completely cured. The Shay home, where L. J. Lepley now lives, was the first place I had a room when I came to Springfield.

I met Mrs. Fannie Griffin on the street the next day. She said she had been taking a course of instruction in millinery work in an establishment on the west side; and the proprietress had lately put her in charge of an establishment on the east side. She lives next door to her daughter, Mrs. Laurel Allum.

Monday morning, I brought my baggage down to the Y. M. C. A. office while I went to breakfast. As I passed in to get it, I passed by a man bending over a city directory, taking notes. What little I could see of the side of his face reminded me of Rev. B. C. Miller, and I remembered that he was to give his lecture on Evolution to the Baptist preacher's meeting of Portland about that time. He was so closely engaged that I thought I would leave him alone until I spoke to the secretary, just on the other side. And while I "was busy here and there, he was gone." (1 Ki. 20:40) He tells me that two or three of the preachers who heard the lecture volunteered to guarantee the expense of publishing it in book form if necessary.

In the waiting room of the union depot I met Lloyd C. Martin, cashier of the First National bank, who was starting on an eastern vacation trip, to be gone until July 1st. The principal objective points which he mentioned were Chicago and his old home town, Argyle, Wisconsin.—H. C. Ethell.

TOWN AND VICINITY

Rev. G. Griffin, of Eugene, will preach at the Baptist church Sunday, June 4, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. A cordial invitation extended to all.

A woman alone in a snow-buried camp. A temper awaiting the hour. A circle of eyes in the night always on guard. See James Oliver Curwood's great outdoor picture at the Bell Theatre next Sunday.

The senior reception by the Juniors of the High school is to be held this Friday evening, June 2. It was to have been last Friday, but was postponed on account of the gymnastic exercises given by the High school girls on that evening. The demonstration was well received by a fair sized crowd of parents and patrons of the school.

Dr. S. Ralph Dipple, dentist, Springfield, Oregon.

Bud McPherson is beginning the erection of a new dwelling on his farm north of Springfield, the first load of lumber being delivered on the ground Saturday. F. B. Wynd has the contract of the building. Mr. Wynd is also doing the necessary carpenter work on the new brick house for Elmer Harlow in Pruneville.

Douglas McLean, the star of "23 1/2 Hours Leave", will be featured in "The Home Stretch," a wonderful race horse story at the Bell Theatre next Wednesday. Don't forget that we are giving away free presents every Wednesday.

The weather man, perhaps stung by the criticisms on his tardiness, and despairing of ever "making up his time," finally decided to skip the Spring station altogether, and has landed us squarely in the Summer station on time. No use talking any more about the backwardness of the season. The season is forward enough. The only thing we can complain of now is we did not get any spring at all. Perhaps next year we will get two springs, and no winter or no summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Van Valzau and Gerald Van Valzau drove up from Portland last Friday evening, arriving after midnight. After a brief visit at the home of Mrs. A. B. Van Valzau, mother of the young men, they returned Sunday afternoon, so that all might be ready for school Monday morning. Mrs. Van Valzau as a teacher and the brothers as students. Recommends Chamberlain's Tablets

Truman Gay, of Eugene, and Miss Beatrice Roberts, of Springfield, were married at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Grace Roberts, Thursday evening, May 25, by Rev. B. C. Miller. They started on a trip to Montana last Sunday.

"Chamberlain's Tablets have been used by my husband and myself off and on for the past five years. When my husband goes away from home he always takes a bottle of them along with him. Whenever I have that heavy feeling after eating, or feel dull, and played out, I take one or two of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up fine," writes Mrs. Newton Vreeland, Minoa, N. Y. Take these Tablets when troubled with constipation or indigestion and they will do you good.

Miss Pearl Nelson, who has been employed at Eggimann's for several months past underwent an operation at Mercy Hospital, Eugene, May 29. She was removed to the home of an aunt in Eugene last Monday.
