EFFECTIVE DISPLAY OF SCHOOL PRODUCTS

The News office has probably never before been such an object of popular interest as it has been in the past week by reason of the display of the products of the Domestic Arts and Manual Training departments of the High School. The effect produced by the combination of the two classes of products has doubt been much better than if they had been displayed separately. People of all ages and classes have stopped to admire and praise them. Many have lingered for a detailed examination, and some have come again and again. The exhibition has heightened interest in the work of the school as a whole. It reflects credit, too, upon the heads of the two departments: A. J. Morgan, of the Manual Training, and Miss Martha Williamson, of the Domestic Arts. Both have been elected for another year.

WITH THE TOURISTS ON THE AUTO CAMP

There have been from three to five cars on the camp each night of late. It has been common for a party or two to turn in for a midday meal, and go on. Some of the travelers express the opinion that there is not as much travel on the road now as there was at this time last year.

One party of travelers, in the course of a ten-days trip from Seattle to Los Angeles, or vice-versa—not a very uncommon thing—will exchange observations and opinions with half the travelers on the road at the time between the two places. This fellowship of the road creates a class sentiment which is freer and has more in common than the associations in politics or business. There is perhaps more of community of spirit among the auto tourists than there is among the commercial travelers. Traveling is an avocation with them, and there is none of the tang of rivalry in it.

By the way, the campers are the advertisers of a camp. Their "good word" and the "pointers" they give other tourists are worth more than expensive signs, fancy fixings, and elaborate attempts to supply all the tourists' imaginary wants. You may carefully plan and build up a camp which you think ought to attract the travelers who ought to come that way; but unless it appeals to the real affections of the travelers who actually test it, the people they meet down the road will give it the go-by.

The travelers who come this way report a pretty general revolt against the pay camp; for various reasons, and among the rich, who might be thought to be indifferent to the matter of expense, as much as anybody else. Some express themselves as fretted by the restrictions. Some say they have too little of real "camp" life. One lady on our ground last year, speaking of a certain camp to the south, said: "It is too artificial." Some travelers report a great falling off, as compared with last year, in the patronage of some large camps which had made extensive preparations to handle a greatly increased traffic this year.

Richard Zeigler and wife, who own a home about Centralia, Washington, had leased it out and spent the winter with relatives about San Diego. They came to our camp last Saturday forenoon, on their way back, and remained until Monday morning. Mr. Zeigler had employed his time during his sojourn in the south, in learning the business of goat farming. They had constructed a cage, metal lined for convenience in cleaning, and fitted it into the back of their car. They were carrying an old female goat and ten young ones, pedigree stock, which they expect to start a goat farm at Centralia. Besides these, they had expressed through an old male.

Two young men from near Springfield, Missouri, had traveled in a northwesterly direction through Colorado, Salt Lake and Boise, to Portland. They stayed on our camp Saturday night, and went on the next day, expecting to leave the Pacific highway at Grants Pass for Crescent City, California.

Two middle-aged couples, whose homes are near Salem, had been on a three-weeks trip, the principal object of which was a visit to the two sisters of the two women, at Los Angeles. They were traveling in two cars. They lodged on our camp Monday night, on their way home.

We were in error, last week, in stating that the detour in the Mountain States Power company's line, from the sub-station to a connection with the California-Oregon line, south of the Booth-Kelly mill pond, would pass around the butte. It follows the Eugene feeder line to where that line turns on South D street. From there a new line is built between the butte and the mill yard to a direct connection with the O.-C. line.

It is being argued that a fourth barber shop could be made to pay in Springfield, by keeping open after supper, so that the farmer and working man would have time to get to the shop after his day's work. The argument is well founded, as this is a working man's town, and we are all dependent on them for our business. Therefore we should strive to make everything convenient for them. From June 8th until after harvest time my shop will be open for you from 8 a. m. to 7 p. m. daily and until 10 p. m. Saturday night. Mr. W. D. Maiden is a first class barber and I believe we can please you. That's our aim and you win all arguments.

—A. A. Anderson, the Barber.

NO BAPTIST SERVICES NEXT SUNDAY EVENING

In forgetfulness of the baccalaureate services at the Methodist church services were arranged and announced for next Sunday evening at the Baptist church. This announcement is hereby withdrawn. There will be no services of any kind at the Baptist church that evening. Rev. Arthur Pengra will preach at 11 a. m.

Dr. S. A. Danford, district superintendent, dropped in for the forenoon services at the Methodist church, last Sunday. He declined to preach, but made some announcements of a general character. The annual conference session will begin September 13. The conference camp meeting will be held at Cottage Grove, July 20-30. Dr. Danford made an appeal to the congregation to come up with its apportionment on the benevolences, as it has been doing. He stated that the board of foreign missions is facing a deficit of $1,500,000 this year.

CASES APPEALED TO TEST JURY LAW

J. J. Chase, of Camp Creek, was convicted at the last term of court of rape upon the person of a little girl. Judge Skipworth sentenced him to serve seven years in the penitentiary, and denied a motion for a new trial. Chase's attorneys appealed the case to the state supreme court. The trial of the case will be a test of the constitutionality of the law providing for the service of women on juries, particularly as to the method of drawing the jury and the number of women who shall serve.

Three pending cases of the same nature were continued until after the supreme court passes upon the questions brought up in the Chase case. If the supreme court finds any defect in this jury law, it will be liable to require a retrial of some cases previously decided under its operation.
