The Roseburg News-Review contributes this gem to the literature of this most perplexing political campaign: "It is still an unsolved mystery who brought Charles Hall into the political arena as an independent candidate. And it is still an unsolved mystery why Hall ever considered such a step."

Julius Meier, the great Portland merchant, who went abroad to stir up interest in the 1925 fair at Portland, has returned somewhat discouraged, on account of the disturbed and demoralized political and business conditions in Europe and Asia, which, in some respects, are worse now than when he started out. It begins to look now as though there would be no fair.

A short time ago it was announced that it was up to the attorney general to decide whether Charles Hall's announcement of his independent candidacy for governor could be accepted. Now it is said that we must look to the attorney general to decide whether Mr. Hall's announcement of his withdrawal can be accepted. In the meantime, Mr. Hall may withdraw his withdrawal before this is in print, and thus impose upon the attorney general the additional duty of deciding whether his withdrawal of his previous withdrawal is legally valid. It may be necessary for the attorney general to issue a bulletin the evening before the election informing the voters of the state who are the candidates for governor. Even then, some of the interior precincts in eastern Oregon may be two or three changes behind.

FORD'S STRIKE WON

Henry Ford's "strike" against the coal profiteers was of short duration. His "indefinite" closing down of his industrial plants and their assembling adjuncts lasted five days. It is explained that a change in a ruling of the interstate commerce commission, putting automobiles on the "essential" list, will enable the Ford factory to get coal in an emergency on the same footing as a private residence or a blacksmith shop. Of course the Ford cars should be put in the class of essentials. They are not generally regaled nor spoken of as luxuries, and they have to be classified somewhere. They are like the dog which a man sold for "a good hunting dog." When charged with misrepresentation, the seller said he supposed the dog must be a good hunter, because he was not good for anything else. On the strength of this change of ruling, Ford will probably claim that he "won the strike."

YOUR NEIGHBOR

What is your neighbor doing in the direction of saving? Complaining that he can't put a cent aside, his expenses are so heavy? Or is he one of the thrifty sort that saves regardless?

But after all, that isn't any of your business, is it? It's much more to the point to analyze your own thrift attitude, and see just how much you are accomplishing, and how much you are actually getting out of your income. For instance have you a "Nationalized" Savings Account?

It must be said for Mr. Ford, to his credit and as an example for other strikers, that his strike has been an orderly and peaceable one. He did not kill nor attempt to kill any of the other automobile manufacturers who persisted in working while he was on strike. He did not beat any of them up. He did not picket their premises to discourage others from dealing with them. He did not issue any scurrilous literature, calling the other automobile manufacturers "scabs" and other vile names and representing them as disreputable persons, because they persisted in working when he thought it was time to rest. Since Mr. Ford doubtless considers that he has won his strike and the most of us are willing to let it go at that, he may be fairly said to have demonstrated the fact that a great moral principle can be established, even in the industrial field, without committing any crime; and that will be a distinct gain in the interest of the real citizenry of this great country.

ENGLAND'S COURSE

England has been called self-

The Ideal Purgative

As a purgative, Chamberlain's Tablets are the exact thing required. Strong enough for the most robust, mild enough for children. They cause an agreeable movement of the bowels without any of the terrible griping. They are easy and pleasant to take and accessible in effect.

It's toasted. This one extra process gives a delightful quality that can not be duplicated ish and inconsistent in its attitude towards Turkey: favoring Turkey's retention of Constantinople in former times, and favoring its expulsion lately.

England's course has been fairly consistent, and excusable on grounds of interest, though not always appearing to be up to high moral ideals. She has not, within the past century, desired to keep the Turk in Europe any more than any of the other western nations. But the shadow of the old Russian empire, a power that was constantly reaching for all the territory that adjoined it, was on all that part of the world. It was a greater terror to England than Turkey was, that was all. England, which was chiefly a maritime nation, did not dare to let Russia into the Mediterranean, let her come into possession of the key to the chief overland trade route and let her thrust a wedge between England and India.

The great war changed the situation. When Russia was allied with England, France and Italy against Germany, Austria and Turkey, England and her allies are reported to have agreed to put Turkey out of Europe and let Russia have Constantinople under conditions which seemed safe.

England struck Turkey the hardest blows it received during the great war. She went, apparently, as far as she could toward ridding the East of the Turkish blight. She would probably have held Turkey where the war left it if she had had a freer hand.

Now bolshevik Russia, the terror of the whole world, and savage Turkey, the terror of the near East, are allies, and England's chief allies are not properly supporting her. If she yields what we think she ought to stand for, and what we are not standing for ourselves, it will be because she dreads to embark in a doubtful war, which might put bolshevism in control of all the east.

MEASURES ANNULLED

As the result of actions brought in the Marion county circuit court and decrees rendered by Judges G. G. Bingham and Percy Kelly, three of the measures filed with the secretary of state and appearing in the voters' pamphlet will not appear on the ballot in the coming general election. They are the graduated "Income Tax Bill," initiated in the name of the Oregon State Grange, and numbered 316 and 317; the 6 per cent "Interest Rate Amendment," initiated by J. F. Albright, of Oregon City, and numbered 312 and 313; and the "Salmon Fishing and propagation Amendment," initiated by G. G. Green, of West Linn, and numbered 306 and 307.

Gross irregularities and disregard of the law in the preparation of petitions, by circulators and notaries public, were found to such an extent that the number of signatures obtained fell far below the required number.

The "1925 Exposition Tax Amendment," to authorize the city of Portland to raise $3,000,000 by special tax or the fair, numbered 308 and 309, is also under examination.

The Key that Unlocks the Door to Long Living.

The men of eighty-five and ninety years of age are not the rotund, well-fed, but thin, spare men, who live on slender diet. Be as careful as he will, however, a man past middle age will occasionally eat too much or of some article of food not suited to his constitution, causing indigestion or constipation and will need a dose of Chamberlain's Tablets to move his bowels and invigorate his stomach. When this is done, there is no reason why the average man should not live to a ripe old age.

Say what you will about druggists offering something "just as good" because it pays a better profit, the fact still stands that ninety nine out of a hundred druggists recommend Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy, when the best medicine for diarrhoea is asked for, and do so because they know from what their customers say of it, that it can be depended upon.
