One of the season's best offerings in historical films is "Ashes of Vengeance," which starts at the Rex theatre Wednesday or a four day run. Starring Norma Talmadge in the leading role, the picture portrays in gorgeous costume, massive settings, and accurate historical background the story of the fateful days of 1572 in France when Charles IX directed the massacre of the Huguenots under the influence of his mother Catherine de Medici. This film was shown in a preview program at the Rex last Sunday afternoon and those who viewed the film found it highly interesting. Twelve hundred ladies and gentlemen of the court dancing in the stately minuet add to the impressiveness of the film, which depicts in a striking manner the extravagances of the court.
