"BOOK OF JOB" TO BE DEPICTED BY PLAYERS

Stuart Walker Players Will Give Dramatic Performance at Heilig Theatre Next Week

A most notable dramatic event is the presentation of the Stuart Walker production of "The Book of Job," which comes to the Heilig theatre at Eugene, Wednesday night, February 6, under the auspices of the Eugene chapter of the American Association of University Women. Nonsectarian colleges and universities have long since recognized the Bible as a great storehouse of poetry, romance and drama, and many of the Bible stories readily assume dramatic form. This superb Biblical story, as dramatized by Stuart Walker, was acclaimed by the critics of New York at the time of its presentation there as the greatest single presentation of several seasons.

The first part of Job is called the prologue, which is delivered in narrative form by the narrators. They tell of the misfortunes that have befallen Job and the affliction which he endures. The niches in which they stand are dim and faint. When they have finished, the center of the stage is illuminated and there one sees Job and his three friends, Eliphaz comes and counsels with them. While they are talking a storm breaks and a voice from the whirlwind speaks to Job. It is the voice of God. At the end the niches are again illuminated and the narrators give the conclusion. One learns of the joy and plenty that falls to Job's lot and the number of years wherein he dwells in peace and happiness.

Aside from "The Book of Job," Mr. Walker will present several plays of his own writing at a special young people's matinee on Wednesday. These will include "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil," "Sir David Wears a Crown," and "The King's Great Aunt." On Tuesday evening he will present his play, "The Very Naked Boy," and two of the masterpieces of Lord Dunsany, "The Gods of the Mountain," and "The Murderers."

For sheer gripping drama, for technical perfection combined with fidelity to human kind and poetical ardor, Dunsany's one-act thriller, "The Murderers," is undoubtedly entitled to first place. "The Gods of the Mountain" has been acclaimed by metropolitan critics as the "finest play of its kind in the English language."

Tickets for the plays are now on
