MANY THRILLS SHOWN IN "FLOWING GOLD" AT REX

If there is one thing of which the great American public cannot get enough it is stories of adventure and romance with a pair of lovers fighting their way through many obstacles and dangers to the ultimate "and they lived happily ever after." From the obscure clerk to the university president all relish tales that stir our emotions and make our blood run faster as we unconsciously take upon us the identity of the characters entertaining us.

That is one of the reasons why

"Flowing Gold," a screen version of Rex Beach's latest novel with Anna Q. Nilsson and Milton Sills, which opens its three day's showing at the Rex in Eugene, today and which is meeting with such huge success in the motion picture theatres of the country. This First National picture, which was produced by Richard Walton Tully and directed by Joe De Grasse, is an example of how the spell of a great story can be intensified on the screen.

THE KIND OF CORN TO GROW

Many farmers are fortunate in having sound feed of a good variety of corn already picked from their own crops. Others must decide soon what kind of corn they will plant and make arrangements for obtaining seed. In deciding what corn to plant, the name of the variety is not important. It is important, however, says the United States Department of Agriculture to know that the strain is well adapted to the conditions where it is to be grown and that the seed is of a high quality.

Strains of corn have been compared in careful experiments in nearly all of the States, not only at the experiment stations, but also in outlying fields. Farmers who are in doubt as to what kind of corn to grow should confer with their county agent or write to their State agricultural experiment station.

"How's your wife, Blinks?" asked Jinks.
"Her head troubles her a good deal," confessed Blinks.
"Neuralgia?"
"No," answered Blinks sadly, "she wears a new hat"—Anna Christian, Missouri Valley, Ia.
