Poem by Uncle John

We love to harbor ideas if they're easy to defend—when we set to makin' figgers on the value of a friend,—but, the sum of any harvest holds the element of doubt, till you reap yer crop of theories and, later, thresh 'em out.

Facts is—we find that friendship comes in several different grades, when we meet the mixed varieties that's common to the trades; if you try to curb expenses when yer love is runnin' short,—well, there's nothin' cheaper'n friendship—when you price the flimsy sort.

But, the everlastin' article that's needed in our arts, is the only kind of friendship that's a balm for human hearts,—in fact, the stuff is priceless—in results that correspond, from Devotion's faithful cellar, where we bottle it—in bond!

BEGINNING TO RUN

Pull The Blind For a Shine in New York

Short skirts in New York resulted in a falling-off of business for shoe shining stands catering to women trade until an inventive "Knight of the Brush" equipped his stand with a common window shade as is shown here. Now milady has her shoes shined with a mind quite at ease.
