"Doug" and His Flying Horse. One of the Most Astounding Features of His Photoplay, "The Thief of Bagdad"

Everybody has heard of the Flying Horse, otherwise our old friend Pegasus, of Greek Mythology; but few, it appears are acquainted with the particulars of its amazing story. This, therefore is a good time to brush up on your Greek Mythology for Douglas Fairbanks is coming in "The Thief of Bagdad," to be presented at the Bell Theatre, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

It will not, of course, require a bookish knowledge of the origin of the Pegasus to enjoy the experience of seeing Doug astride this prodigy, dashing athwart the sky. The introduction of the Winged Horse in "The Thief of Bagdad" is, however, only one of the flabbergasting features of this most astonishing of photoplays,—surpassing even in wonder its Magic Globe, which unveils the past and the future; the Enchanted Apple, which restores life to the dead; and the Magic Carpet, on which you can fly over the housetops and into the sky.

Doug built this amazing toy: When bookish knowledge of the origin of the Pegasus to enjoy the experience of sending a week at the ranch at Pleasant Hill returned to their home at Jefferson Sunday.
