

Sallie's Temptations

Ellie's Reckless Philosophy Shock's Sallie

You're a perfect lamb, Ellie, to want to get me out of this and after Father has been home a few days, Doctor Gray will probably be glad to have me leave as he still thinks I need a change.

"How is your Father?" asked Ellie. "In fine shape again, bless his heart, but I know he is going to wonder what made Curtiss clear out."

"There you go worrying about him again, Sallie, it's so unlike you to be on this side of the fence. It's usually that string of suitors you keep intact who go in for the worrying game. Snap out of it. If Curtiss Wright doesn't like your own attractive self and prefers Anne Coddington who is positively drab, YOU should get a permanent frown.

"Ellie I wish I could take life as you do. I used to be able to until I met him. He makes me see how worthless we are." I sighed.

Ellie reached for a fresh cigarette, tapped it on the back of her daintily manicured hand, opened her mouth to reply and then became silent again.

"What's your philosophy, sport?" I asked.

"It's this way, I think, Sallie," her voice took on a more serious tone, "decide first what it takes to give you the most happiness in life. If and narrow every minute to make things square when you're face to face with yourself, then walk it by all means, my dear, but—" she tapped the ashes from her cigarette, regarded it thoughtfully and smiling like Peter Pan, continued her remarks, "on the other hand, if you have figured out that your conscience will stand the things that give you the sort of happiness you want, then—disregard all traffic signals and sail ahead."

"I don't think I get you, do you mean—"

"Just this, Sallie, I take what bit of bubbly, thrilling joyousness each day holds forth. I must have excitement to make me feel alive. You're different. You're always puzzling your pretty head over problems of right and wrong. That takes all the kick out of the wine. For instance, I don't want to get married. In the first place, I've seen to much of this luke warm affection and mental stagnation among our own little crowd. Why would I be any different from all the lovely little girls who have ceased to amuse or be amused?" she laughed.

"But don't you want babies, Ellie?" I asked rather at her viewpoint for, while I knew Ellie was ultra modern in her ideas, it was startling to hear them actually voiced.

"Not if they have to be marked on other people as I've been since my arrival was announced."

"But, Ellie, surely you're not an advocate of free love?"

"No," she hunted for the next words, "I never got out to that until I fell for the wiles of a distracting Lothario who couldn't be led to the altar in chains."

"Too bad!" I thought, Ellie had probably fallen in love with one of the many men in our set who balk at matrimony and its ties.

"Well, what are you going to do?" I asked.

"I'm not going to enter a convent and try to kill my infatuation with fasting and prayers."

"Ellie," I went over and sat beside her on the chaise longue. "This isn't like you. You know you'd ten times rather be married than—thing how awful it'll be when you're old. If a man isn't married to you, he'll never stick."

"And if he is married?" she was cynical and shrugged her shoulders.

FIR CAMPS SLOW LOG PRODUCTION

Portland, May 8—(Special)—Continued short-week operation of a large number of fir mills and the resultant accumulation of logs in many districts, last week brought about a further curtailment of logging operations, according to reports from 4L employment service offices in various northwestern cities received at 4L headquarters here today. Fallers and buckers have been laid off at several camps in the Willapa Harbor, Grays Harbor and Puget Sound districts, and other camps have been entirely closed.

The general trend of employment is upward, however, as most loggers recently laid off are finding work in other industries. Mining, fishing and shipping are employing more men than they did one year ago.

River drives in the Inland Empire are finished and summer logging is well underway. Pine sawmills there are busy cutting stock. Condensed reports from the various 4L offices follow:

Portland—Calls for loggers and for farm help peaked last week's demand for men. Labor turnover in the camps is heavy. Logging along the Columbia river continues active and nearly all camps are operating. The Crossett Western Company added one side to its camps at Knappa during the week. There is still a good demand for construction and road building laborers and there are plenty of men here to fill it.

Raymond, Wn.—Due to an oversupply of logs on Willapa Harbor, camp 12 of the Sunset Timber company, and Camp Bert of the Raymond Lumber company have been closed. Lumber production here continues to be curtailed. There are more men than jobs in this district.

with a bitter little laugh.

Again I asked her, "What are you going to do about it?"

"Why should I worry?" she demanded. "With Mother and Dad chasing all over the world, I have absolute freedom of the house. One gets damnably lonesome with no family or anyone to care."

I patted her but she drew away.

"Ellie, this man has forced his distorted views on you. You never felt like this before."

"Well, what if he has?" she flashed back, "I'm getting along pretty well. We're planning a wonderful time down south."

"You mean He'll be there?" I asked.

"You don't think I'd be all pepped up over the prospect of rushing around to a bunch of dances and cocktail fights with a crowd of callow youths?"

"Who ever it is, I think he's a cad!" I cried, taking advantage of you just because your Mother and Father are away.

"But, Sallie, even the qualms of conscience aren't as bad as being neglected. Delicate attention and a perfect lover aren't so dusty after all, besides," she added, "there's always a distant chance of wedding bells. It that passes your Puritanical mind."

She spoke lightly but when she mentioned marriage, I noticed she brightened perceptibly and there was an eager light in her eyes.

If I were any judge of human nature Ellie wanted to get married for some reason, the suitor of whom she had spoken, did not.

We have installed a NEW WAY HAT BLOCK MACHINE

We can now dry clean and block your hat so that there will not be a trace of dust, dirt or grease in it when finished. The live steam will reliven the fabric and sizing of the hat, restore its original shape and color and give it that fresh new appearance found in new hats. The lining will also look like new.

This "NEW WAY" hat cleaning and blocking outfit is the latest innovation in the hat cleaning industry, making it possible to give the same mill finish as a new hat—after cleaning and blocking.

THIS HOME HAS INDIVIDUALITY

Of the numerous home plans presented recently there has been a wide variation of room arrangement and the plan above will be hard to equal. Perhaps the outstanding feature is the compactness and convenience of the room arrangement. Both floor plans are built with the idea that present day home owners want a deal of light and air. From the large windows at the front of the house to the spacious size of the windows in the kitchen there is a flood of light that will be appreciated by the most particular.

The large veranda will have an appeal to all who like this sort of comfort. There is a roominess here that speaks of hospitality that helps to make a house a real home. The offset carrying the windows for the living rooms enhance the appearance of the house to a remarkable degree.

Any home looks better with a few shrubs and flowers. A few well selected plants, properly placed, will add materially to the beauty of the home.

The plan to be shown next week has marked deviations from any of those shown here-to-fore and will embody features that will be of real interest to any one who is looking forward to the ownership of a new home.
