PRUNE BAKING CONTEST AT LANE COUNTY FAIR

Final arrangements have been made for the first prune bread making contest to be held during the Lane County fair. An attractive booth is being decorated in the boy's and girl's club department where daily demonstrations will be given by teams of two girls representing each of the cooking clubs of the county. The team making the highest score during the week will represent the county at the Pacific International in Portland October 31 to November 7 when the state contest is held.

Oregon raises enough prunes to feed world," said Arnold D. Collier, county club leader. "And Lane county club girls are doing their bit to advertise local fruit. The prune used in the demonstration will be furnished by the Eugene Fruit Growers' association."

A special representative from the Crown Flour mills in Portland will be in the county the entire week of the fair and will act as judge of the demonstrations. The hours for the demonstration will be 10 and 2 each day of the fair.

The following club leaders are coaching their teams in preparation for the county contest: Mrs. Martha Wallace, Jasper; Sister Mary Mathew, Eugene; Mrs. E. L. Edwards, Junction City; Mrs. Cora Pirtle, Coburg; Mrs. Holliston, Creswell and Mrs. Steel, Creswell.

WESTERN RASPBERRY RUST DOES NOT DESTROY PLANT

Western raspberry rust is not serious enough in Oregon to justify grubbing the bushes up, as viewed by Dr. S. M. Zeller, plant pathologist of the experiment station. No adequate control measures are known.

The rust appears in early summer as small spots on the upper and under surfaces of leaves. The spots are spore masses produced by the fungus that lives in the leaf tissues, and are sometimes so numerous as to cover the leaves with yellow powder. The spore masses on leaves and cane cankers become black in the late season.

In its worst form the rust devitalizes the plants, but not so seriously as to stunt the plants untill by other causes such as poor soil and degeneration diseases. Infection of new canes near the ground is the most serious phase of the disease in Oregon plantings. It causes cankers which eat into the cane causing brittleness. Such canes are hard to trellis and not infrequently break off in removal of the old canes.

The western raspberry rust is not to be confused with the orange rust, prevalent in the east but seldom found in the west, which renders the plants worthless. This form of rust completely covers the under side of the leaf with an orange powder.

This rust is perennial in infected plants, lying dormant in winter and breaking out again in the spring. Because of this the plants so infested should be dug out and burned, but this radical treatment is not recommended with the western rust.

Taking out the fruiting canes as soon as the crop is picked will greatly reduce the source of infection. The old canes are cut as near the ground as possible. Where practical, the old leaves are taken out and destroyed. Otherwise, they are plowed under before the new leaves come out in the spring.

FARM REMINDERS

Growers who are using the paradichlorobenzene treatment for peach and prune root borers will not find it effective unless its application is followed by 10 days of 55 degrees, Fahrenheit or higher. The soil must be reasonably dry.

In handling pears the cool night temperature is of much benefit. The temperature of Bartlett pears picked in the heat of the day dropped from 104 to 63 degrees when left out at night.

Only a clear fruit juice can be depended on to make a clear, sparkling jelly. Cloudiness is due to suspended particles that cannot be removed by ordinary methods of filtration.

Now that sufficient moisture has fallen to enable garden seed to germinate, it is recommended that farm gardeners plant as many vegetables as possible for late fall and early winter use, including spinach, head lettuce, radishes, turnips, onion sets or onion seed, and peas and cabbage for next spring's early crop.

The best head lettuce that will be available when the first cold weather of November and early December arrives will come from the cold frames in which the lettuce plants, set at a distance of a foot apart, will be protected by glass sash from unfavorable conditions such as frost and heavy rains. Make a seedling of New York variety immediately and harvest some solid lettuce by Thanksgiving.
