

Confidence By Flo

Dear Miss Flo:—Probably I'll seem old fashioned to you when you know what is on my mind, but I should greatly appreciate your advice in the matter. I have been engaged to a man for six years—and I have not seen him for four years out of the six. He is coming back to my home town to marry me, and I am afraid that when he sees me again looking older he will not love me.

I hate the thought of using any artificial means to deceive him. My hair has prematurely started to turn—and it is a little gray in places. I have never used powders or rouges, and ten years ago I should have said that any woman who "made up" was far beyond the pale of propriety. But now, faced with the consequences of looking too old, I feel almost that I am justified in doing so.

I know he uses to detest make-up. He used to comment adversely upon the looks of girls who were made up. So you see, Miss Flo, I am between the devil and the deep blue sea. If I don't do something he may look upon me as an old maid, and perhaps leave me one. And if I do make up and he finds it out, I may lose his love and respect anyway. Please advise me, Edith.

Of one thing you must be sure, Edith—if you try to make up to fit in the flapper class, and try to compete with girls young enough to be your daughters, you will only succeed in making yourself ridiculous. You can't do it, and you will make yourself cheap and ridiculous when you attempt it. Stay in your own class and keep the dignity and distinction that go with it.

Your chance is in making the opposite play. Emphasize your ripe, rich, mellow maturity, as against the flappers' cullow, crude immaturity. Give to the man a real companionship, a real understanding, and a real sympathy that no flapper can possibly give. Pit your experience of men, your tact and subtlety against their egotistic self-absorption, and if the man is worthy of you, you will win out.

On the other hand—be fair to yourself. Your attitude of mind is a very rare thing today, and your ideals of fairness and constancy are greatly to be admired. But do not carry them to extreme.

As for the use of make-up, I can't think your ideas are a bit old fashioned. Not your ideas of propriety, but your conception of the nature of modern make-up. Since your fiancé spoke of the girls so obviously made up, six years have passed. And in these years much has been done toward perfecting make-up, even including tints for brightening up dull, faded and streaked hair.

Artistically and sensibly used the modern make-up is a direct aid to beauty and youth.

I believe every woman is justified in maintaining her youthful appearance as long as possible, and that she is justified in using wholesome artifices of beauty. The danger lies in overdoing it.

If men were different if they were able to see character apart from beauty, these subtleties of women would be unnecessary. The finest men, those who admire character more than beauty, like the woman of their choice to care enough about her own personal appearance to keep fresh and wholesome looking.

Therefore, my advice to you, Edith, is to go to the very best, most reliable beauty shop in town and ask the aid only of experts. Don't go in for drastic measures—they are dangerous. Ask advice as to the kind of powder, rouge, etc., you should use.

Ask their advice in regard to safely and naturally restoring your hair to its natural beauty.

This, I advise you to do, in justice to yourself, and the man you are to marry.

95,000 MEN AT WORK IN LOGGING CAMPS AND MILLS OF NORTHWEST

PORTLAND, Sept. 17.—(Special.)—A total of 95,000 men are at present employed in the logging camps and sawmills of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, as compared with 91,700 men on May 1 of this year, and 97,000 men one year ago, according to a survey just completed by headquarters of the 4L organization here. The number of men at present employed in this work will undoubtedly be increased somewhat during the next month when more logging sides are started, the report stated, although this condition will prevail only until the first heavy fall of snow closes high altitude camps on the coast, and cold weather prevents lumber cutting at sawmills east of the Cascades.

Current employment conditions in all parts of the Pacific Northwest are very good, the 4L labor report says. Skilled sawmill help is well employed, the demand for loggers is heavy, hop picking is at peak activity, and the early apple harvest has started. Outdoor building and construction work is still active but there has been a lessening demand for laborers from this source.

Your Birthday Is it this week?

September 13-19

If your birthday is this week, one of your strongest characteristics is your demand for personal freedom. It is difficult for you to submit to the rule of others. While rather shy and timid, you are quick to express your own views, often thinking your ideas better than any one's else. However, you are tolerant of other people's views, providing you are permitted to enjoy your own peace and opinions. You are a keen observer; small details never escape your notice. You are critical, but your criticisms are usually of a corrective kind, made without any ill-feeling. You have a fine sense of honor, and never betray a trust reposed in you.

The women are the greatest match-makers in the world, fond of arranging matrimonial alliances among people they know, and equally as fond of breaking off such matches as seem to them inharmonious and unsuitable.

When intellectually developed, persons born under these dates are capable of great accomplishments. However, when undeveloped they are egotistical, verbose severe and unkind. The woman make fine authors, musicians, artists, designers, and milliners. The men make fine editors.
