HOT PACK CORN FOR SUCCESSFUL HOME CANNING

In canning a starchy, nonacid vegetable like sweet corn it is necessary to watch every step to insure a safe, appetizing product, says the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture. Success is not just a matter of luck. Behind every jar of home-canned food that keeps or spoils there is a reason. The following directions for home canning sweet corn are based on all the facts the department can obtain.

Corn for canning should be gathered about 17 to 25 days after silking, the exact time depending upon variety and season. Shuck, silk, and clean carefully. Cut from the cob without precooking. Add half as much boiling water as corn by weight, heat to boiling, add one teaspoon of salt and two teaspoons of sugar to each quart, and fill boiling hot into containers. Process immediately at 15 pounds pressure, or 250 degrees F., quart glass jars for 80 minutes, pint glass jars for 70 minutes, and No. 2 tin cans for 70 minutes. Corn should not be canned in No. 3 tin cans because of the difficulty of heat penetration.

Write to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Miscellaneous Circular 24, giving time-tables for home canning of fruits and vegetables.

RAILROAD HEAD VIEWS COOS BAY COUNTRY

Ralph Budd Said to Be Interested in Route to Coast

Residents of the Coos bay section entertain hopes that another railroad may enter that rapidly developing country from the east, as the result of a reported visit there recently of Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern and director of the Hill line extensions, with a party of associates. Mr. Budd and his party arrived at Brookings the latter part of last week from Klamath Falls.

Mr. Budd has been watching the contest between his road and the Southern Pacific relative to the extension of the Hill lines south of Bend, it is said. The officials of the Hill lines are said to be anxious to build their road into San Francisco, but have not indicated whether they will go south from Klamath Falls or west from that point to the coast.

Coos bay observers say there is a possibility that the road may be built west from Bend to the coast, continuing south along the shores of the Pacific—Cottage Grove Sentinel.

Stranger: "Would you mind telling me, who is that man over there?"

Native: "That's Bill S'mpkins—and we folks in this town think him the laziest man in the world."

Stranger: "Well—he can't be the laziest man—else he would either get up or sit down—instead of holding himself up in that position on his hands."

Native: "You're wrong there, stranger. Some of the boys put a tack on that bench—and Bill's too lazy to get off it."
