USE THE HOT PACK IN HOME CANNING

The hot-pack method of canning vegetables at home has all the advantages of any other plus several of its own, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

Whether tomatoes, beans, corn, greens, or any other vegetables, it packs to better advantage is precooked for a few minutes before being put into the can. Tin cans packed with boiling-hot vegetables may be sealed at once without the usual exhaust and put into the canner for processing. Also vegetables packed hot into any kind of container and placed in the canner reach the temperature necessary for processing in shorter time than those packed cold, and the heat penetrates through them more evenly. This may mean success or failure in canning some nonacid vegetables. Corn, sweet potatoes, and greens, for instance, are likely to settle into a solid mass that heat does not penetrate easily. Consequently the food at the center of the can may not become hot enough to kill the injurious bacteria. The hot pack, therefore, has scientific reasons to back it up.

Send to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for Miscellaneous Circular 24. It gives time-tables and brief directions for home canning all the common kinds of fruits and vegetables.
