THE PUBLIC MARKET.

In a few days a public market will be opened in Springfield. This market if properly managed will be a great assistance to farmers of this community as well as an asset to Springfield.

Contrary to the first impression that a public market where fruits, vegetables and meats are sold injure the trade of the merchant in these products, wherever the public market has been tried it has resulted in increased business in these stores over a period of months.

Springfield has too long "swapped" pennies between its own people. The only new money brought into the town comes through the saw mills and flour and feed mill. The time has come when this town must make a strong bid for the farmers' trade—the trade that is rightfully Springfield's own.

WITH A MILLION POLICEMEN.

Representatives of Collier's Weekly have been making a house to house poll on prohibition enforcement. It is asserted that 263,000 men and women have been queried. While a majority, 61.2 per cent, express dissatisfaction with the enforcement of the law in their communities, about the same number have expressed their confidence that prohibition could be enforced adequately.

The appearance of Main street would be enhanced greatly if the artificial forest of light and other poles were removed to the alleys. With the opening of the McKenzie highway we have an opportunity here to make Main street a show window for our town.

The Kentucky banker who fled with $45,000 of the bank's money and two women, took with him liabilities as well as assets.

Potatoes are peeled and butter is sliced by electricity on the battleship Tennessee. Nothing left for the gobs to do but eat and fight. K. P. is a pipe.

Human nature never changes, but it often short changes.

Girls usually second the motion after seeing a new dance step.

Opportunity often finds the doorbell broken.

News that Mr. Enright, New York's police commissioner intends to take a vacation is interesting, in that it squares perfectly with the intention of the incoming mayor.

Surely Barnum's shade must look on the modern press agent in scorn when it thinks of the great opportunity provided by the Tut family, left unheralded and unsung.

Forbidding Greece and Bulgaria to fight seems a little like "trying it on the dog."

COLONEL MITCHELL'S CRIME.

Safely it may be predicted that Colonel William Mitchell will be punished by the court martial before whom he is now on trial. To employ a milder term he will almost certainly be disciplined, and it is within the possibilities that the court will recommend his dismissal from the army.

What "crime" did this daring and brilliant aviator commit? His best friend would be compelled to admit that he was guilty of talking too much and too intemperately. There can be no question that he violated the code of United States army etiquette. In this matter, it is only fair to say that he was guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman.

Colonel Mitchell may or may not have a fair trial. The fact that two members of the court—one of them its presiding officer—were clearly disqualified shows that the secretary of war exercised no discrimination when he selected the court. A third member who was peremptorily challenged is further evidence of bias against the defendant.

Counsel for the defense when he set up the plea for the constitutional right of free speech failed utterly. With no intent to start an argument on this question, it may be remarked that no rational person would set up a claim that free speech, as guaranteed by the Constitution, confers the right upon a military officer openly and contemptuously to criticize a superior officer. Some natural rights of civilians are denied to soldiers.

At this trial, several million people are sitting as a court, entirely independent of the official body. They will hear the testimony and they will not bother themselves or be bothered with technicalities. They demand to know whether the charges of inadequacy in our air defense, made by Colonel Mitchell, are true or not true. If they are true, the citizens' great court will protest against extreme punishment for the defendant for telling the truth.

The judgment of the formal court will not be a finality. The president of the United States must approve it. A severe reprimand or something more drastic would probably be passed by unnoticed, but a verdict to dismiss Colonel Mitchell from the army would bring on a storm of protest from every state in the Union, and this storm would break directly on the White House.—Portland Telegram.

"CONSIDER THE RETAIL STORE OF SALEM"

The seventh of a series of advertisements published each Sunday in The Statesman for the purpose of reminding the people here of the many advantages of patronizing their home town merchants, is published this morning.

And it is well worth reading. The appeal is plain and straightforward and truthful. It shows that the man or woman who fails to patronize his home people is neither 100 per cent loyal to his home town nor 100 per cent efficient in looking out for his or her own interests.

"The way to build up Salem is to patronize Salem people," is a slogan carried by The Statesman for many years. It is a true slogan.

And in fact a strict adherence to it by every one here, together with a full measure of understanding of and loyalty to all our advantages and interests, would make Salem over; would make over the surrounding country and the other cities and towns of this district.

For we have it in our splendid resources and our own powers to make this the most prosperous and progressive city and country in all the world.

And loyalty to our own is the first requirement.—Oregon Statesman.

SCARLET FEVER DISCUSSED BY BOARD OF HEALTH

Why is scarlet fever prevalent in Oregon?

Largely because mild cases are not diagnosed and properly isolated. Thirty-six cases were reported for the week ending October 24, 1925.

Why is scarlet fever a dangerous disease of childhood?

Because two to four persons out of every one hundred infected die from the disease itself and its complications and consequences are even more serious.

Are "scarlatina" and "scarlet rash" forms of scarlet fever?

Yes. It is through the mild cases that the disease is most often spread. What ages are most susceptible to scarlet fever?

It may be contracted at any age but more than 95 per cent of all cases occur in persons less than 15 years old. Children between five and ten years are most susceptible.

At what time of the year is scarlet fever most prevalent?

Epidemics are most prevalent in the fall and winter.

How is it spread?

By contact with persons ill with the disease or with articles that have been contaminated with the germ. If the germs get into the milk supply a milk-borne epidemic will follow. How long after the infection do symptoms develop?

From one to seven days.

What are the first symptoms? Headache, fever, sore throat, vomiting. The rash appears in 24 to 48 hours.

When is scarlet fever communicable?

Throughout the entire course of the disease. Completion of the scaling or peeling does not mark the end of the infection period, for the germs are prevalent in the secretions of the throat, nose, ears, kidneys and bowels.

What are the secondary effects? Inflammation of the kidneys is a common one. Complications of the ear are numerous, scarlet fever being one of the most common causes of deafness in children.

Is there any protection against scarlet fever?

Yes. There is a susceptibility test known as the Dick test.

There is also an anti-toxin for immunizing the susceptible.

How long should scarlet fever be quarantined?

Not less than 31 days.—Oregon State Board of Health.

Seven years have passed into eternity since that gray November day when nations penned a truce, and the world paused to bury its mangled dead and bandage up its bleeding sons.

Seven peaceful years have followed, all so filled with busy enterprise and prosperity that we are apt to forget our sons, husbands and sweethearts who laid down their lives, for you and for me.

Let us not forget, but let us pray for them and that they have not died in vain.
