IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE STATE OF OREGON FOR LANE COUNTY.

Blanche M. Hurley, Plaintiff, vs. John D. Brown, R. D. Brown, Francis Brown, William Brown, Barilla Jackson, Mary M. Bucknell, Maud Whitlock, Mrs. C. A. Berkley, Mrs. C. J. Bennett, R. C. Beale, Herbert L. Van Dusen, Belle Stafford, Rachael Cochran, and the unknown heirs of John F. Childs, deceased, Defendants. SUMMONS.

To Mary M. Bucknell, Mrs. C. A. Berkley, R. C. Beale, Rachael Cochran, and the unknown heirs of John F. Childs, deceased, Defendants.

IN THE NAME OF THE STATE OF OREGON: You and each of you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled suit on or before the date of the last day of publication of this summons, to-wit: On or before the 14th day of January, 1926, and if you fail to appear and plead to said complaint within said time, for want thereof the plaintiff will apply to the Court for the relief prayed for in the complaint filed herein, to-wit:

For a decree establishing the deed from John Brown to James H. Cochran and that the same be made a matter of record and the title of said property described as Lots One and Four of Block Three of Mulligan's Addition on the West to Eugene, Lane County, Oregon, except the South 60 feet of said Lot Four be made perfect and complete as against the heirs of said John Brown; that a deed from John F. Childs and Mary F. Childs of July 2, 1858, recorded in Volume B page 447 of Deed Records of Lane County, Oregon, be corrected so as to make the description in said deed read "Lot No. One in Block No. Three in Mulligan's Addition on the West to the Town of Eugene City, in Lane County, Oregon."

And that the title of plaintiff as against all of the defendants and as to each thereof be forever quieted in the plaintiff and as to each and all of said defendants plaintiff be decreed to be the absolute owner of the premises described in fee simple and for such other relief as to the Court may seem equitable and just.

This summons is served upon you by publication in the The Springfield News for six successive and consecutive weeks, pursuant to an order duly made and entered by the Honorable G. P. Skipworth, Judge of the above entitled Court, on the 27th day of November, 1925.

Date of first publication December 3, 1925. Date of last publication January 14, 1926.

Sallie Meets an Old Friend. Also an Interesting and Handsome Man

What was the colour? Black or red?

For the briefest part of a second I closed my eyes.

If I won how thrilling it would be telling of my good fortune at home. If I lost it would be more or less awkward admitting to Curtiss that I had thrown away three times the amount that I had declared would be my limit at the wheel.

The croupier was announcing the result of the play, I looked quickly at the ball.

Number 17. "Noir," avowed the woman on the right who had urged me on.

I smiled sheepishly for by some vague intuition I had known all along that it was not red.

"See, I have lost, aussi," she continued, lapsing into her own tongue.

"Yes, but how much? Combien?" I inquired.

"Cent francs," she replied.

"About five dollars? Rather less than 200," I could not help but wonder why she had encouraged me to stake my entire pile.

"Oh, well, c'est ne fait rien," I added, preparing to leave.

Instantly new bets were made and my loss was utterly forgotten by the other players whose attention was given to the next turn of the wheel.

I had never in all my life been treated with such absolute indifference and indignantly, I pushed back my chair.

"Sallie!" I heard my name called in a familiar voice. I looked up.

"Ellie, darling!" I exclaimed. And regardless of the unbroken quiet of the room we continued our exclamations of delight as we greeted each other in a fond embrace.

"Where on earth did you come from? How long are you going to stay? Where are you going to stay? Where are you stopping? And where's Curtiss?" All in one breath Ellie asked. Only the last question brought me back to my every-day mind.

"Over there!" I answered, "and secretly I think he's frightfully bored. He doesn't approve of all this," nodding towards the players and the roulette wheels, "Come along, you'll see him up. Oh, here he is."

Curtiss had made his way across the room to meet us and we stood still for a moment to chat.

"This is luck!" Ellie declared, "we're just dashing over to Ciro's for a little frisk. So of course you'll come along. Get your cape Sallie and we'll meet you outside." She was gone.

"Well?" Curtiss inquired with his enigmatic smile, "as far as the rest of the evening is concerned it doesn't seem as if we had much choice."

"Mine would be to go anyway. I adore Ellie you know and we haven't had half a chance to talk. What's the matter. Aren't you happy, dear? Noticing the unmistakable look of disappointment in his eyes.

"Naturally, except I had rather hoped we'd have a little party all by ourselves, out there," he pointed to the Cafe de Paris with its many little tables gleaming white under the stars. "It's too lovely a night to stay indoors."

"But, honey, you don't seem to realize that I'm seeing Ellie, my very best friend in all the world."

"I'm sorry. I don't mean to crab the party," he apologized, "my wanting you to myself is the penalty you pay for making me love you so," he explained.

And then Ellie arrived with a party of friends.

"Mr. and Mrs. Lowell DeWight." She introduced a stunning couple whom she explained, were originally from Boston but had resided long enough in Paris to "live it down."

"Mrs. DeWight was prematurely gray, the sort of snowy grayness caused by a terrific and sudden shock. Her faultless coiffure framed a young and interestingly pretty face.

She was gowned in tones of amethyst with earrings and other precious stones to match her costume. Mr. DeWight, a typical cosmopolitan, was bending low over my hand.

"And this—this is Barrington Pierce."

In the flickering light of the open doorway, I looked up to greet the newcomer and as his gaze met mine

I found myself stumbling over the polite sentence I had mechanically framed. As his hand met mine, in a firm handshake, I merely smiled.

I think the reason for my sudden embarrassment was that I was conscious of looking into the face of a man whose features and expression were of such unearthly beauty that they were almost Byronic.

"He's marvelous," whispered Ellie walking by my side, "you know he's just thirty and is already headed towards international fame."

"American?" I asked.

"Yes, at one time, but he's lived on the continent so long—that is, for ten years—that he has absorbed a lot of foreign poise. Speaks five languages my dear and is a 'slave to his career. But he's a lamb-pie really, and thoroughly unspotted."

There was no further chance to ask her the nature of his absorbing career. We had reached Ciro's and found a table in the smart supper room where romances, tragedies, adventures, bold robberies and even suicides are concocted over its famous hors d'ouevres.

Mr. DeWight ordered wine. But when it was served, Barrington Pierce silently pushed his glass aside.

"One could tell you were not recently from the states," I said, "we don't often have a chance to refuse champagne."

"I prefer Evian," he replied, raising his water goblet and quaffing half the glass.

"What are you two finding in common?" demanded Ellie who was having her second glass of wine.

"There's only two things Americans discuss over here. Prohibition and—more prohibition," I declared. They all laughed.

"Some friends of mine were saving the other day in Paris that if I should return to the states that it would be impossible for me to go out and not take a lot to drink. That's absurd," Mr. Pierce affirmed. "I don't here where one can have fine cognac and wine—then why should I where I am told the favorite cocktail is made of orange juice and alcohol."

"But you would, Barry, mon cher," Ellie laughingly replied "because if you went on parties over there and ordered water they'd say you were a sad bird and never ask you again."

"Well you'll see Ellie, because I am coming to America next year. I won't drink though because I can't and work."

"Work!" There's a wealth of meaning in the word—the way he said it made it perfectly clear that his was no ordinary job. One of the arts perhaps. I was consumed with curiosity. I wanted to ask more about this extraordinarily handsome youth with his clear, olive complexion and quiet, unassuming air.

I gave him a swift glance. Ellie evidently saw approval in my eyes.

"Uh-huh, I think so too," she said out loud.

"Shall we dance?" he asked, suddenly raising his eyes and meeting my gaze. I hesitated for a moment.

Curtiss and I had a sort of unwritten agreement that we should always dance the first time together when out at a supper or dance.

But there was a strange, unfeeling command in the dark, "ominous eyes of the man at my side.

Why shouldn't I tease Curtiss a little? He had been most negligent about complimenting my gown and I remembered my little threat that I would make him jealous before the night at Monte Carlo had gone. Besides, I recalled the reasoning of some of my friends that it was necessary for one's husband to know that his wife was still desirable in the eyes of other men.

Curtiss was looking across the table from where he sat, signaling to me to rise. I did. But it was to accept the invitation of Barrington Pierce.

Next Week: Read what Curtiss did!

Bacterial gummosis of cherry in western Oregon is capable of wrecking a fine healthy young cherry orchard in the first few years of its life. Orchardists who use mazzard cherry seedling trunk and frame work for all varieties of sweet cherries find that the bodies of such trees nearly always escape this destructive disease, says H. P. B. Brass, plant pathologist of the experiment station.
