

Confidence By Flo

Dear Miss Flo:—I'm very much in love with a wonderful girl—but I don't think she even knows I'm living. Sometimes I meet her at dances and different places, and she is always very friendly, but by the time I think of something to say—she's gone. How does a man win a woman anyway, Miss Flo? What should he talk about? Does he treat her rough—or is he kind and considerate. Does he tell her how popular he is with other girls—or does he tell her that he never goes out with girls? The girl I love is very popular, and while I'm fairly good-looking, a fairly good dancer, and a fairly good dresser, I don't seem to be making much of a bit with her. It's easy for a girl to get any man she wants—all she has to do is to flatter him a little, and the first thing he knows he is paying the first installment on the furniture, but with a man it's different—especially a man who is sort of bashful to start with. Fred.

Well, Freddie, the first thing I should advise you to do is to learn to talk to women—and the next time you meet this wonderful girl don't let her get away until you have said something particularly nice. Girls like men to entertain them with bright chatter, merry cracks and funny jests. I read an article one time that was written by a bigamist who had been married about eighteen times. He said it was the easiest thing in the world to win any woman—all you had to do was just talk to them about themselves. And I think that theory still holds good.

Women like to be flattered. They love it. You need have no fear that you are boring a woman as long as you are telling her that she has wonderful eyes—that you love to see her smile, because she has such a pretty dimple in her cheek—that the first time you saw her you knew right away that she was different, somehow—and that she was just the girl for you.

Don't talk about yourself. No girl wants to hear a man monologue about the commonplace details of his uneventful life. Don't talk to her about your private affairs. Don't think you'll win her by appealing to her sympathy for you as a poor, forlorn, neglected man that all other girls have passed by. She doesn't want you if she thinks nobody else will have you. But, never boast of your conquests. In the first place, it isn't the gentlemanly thing to do—and in the second place, if you tell her that, she'll become suspicious.

The strictly personal line works. Another successful line is to display an interest in the girl's interests. Most girls do things now-days—and they are interested in club work, sports, and quite a number of them are very much interested in current events, books, politics, etc.

Don't think many women prefer the cave-man type. Most women appreciate and love the men who are kind and considerate of them—who are unselfish and thoughtful. They like better in theory, perhaps, the cave-man—but when it comes to the actual thing, few women like to be treated rough.

I'd like to give you some authentic rules for making the woman you want love you—but I don't think there are any. What makes a hit with some women will drive another woman away from you. Tastes differ—and the only thing I can advise you to do is to talk—about most anything—but don't allow her to keep running away from you. Go after her.

All you can do is study your girl—find out what she is interested in—find out what she likes to do. The rest will be easy—and success always comes to the patient waiter. If you rush a girl hard enough—and long enough—you are pretty sure to get her. If, however, you're not the man she wants—nothing you can do will make your case any stronger.

"NORTH OF NOME" TO BE SHOWN AT BELL

"North of Nome," a vivid picturization of life, love and adventure in the frozen north, will be shown next Wednesday the 27 at the Bell theatre.

It was produced by George Edward Lewis for release by Arrow Pictures corporation and features Robert McKim, one of the best known "heavyweights" on the screen, and lovely Gladys Johnston, selected by popular vote as the most beautiful girl in the Alaskan territory.

There are many exciting sequences in this great outdoors production and, too, there are scenes of such natural splendor and magnificence as were never before recorded by the camera's eye. Detail for detail—cast, story, direction and settings—"North of Nome" is said to be one of the greatest pictures ever to be shown in Springfield.

As an additional musical treat this entire picture will be accompanied by an orchestra known as "The Alaskan" exponents of classics and symphonization.—Paid Adv.

Removal of the candy shop at the Eggmann Candy kitchen to the lower floor is under way this week. The shop will occupy the rooms formerly used by the Fröse bakery.

Two men have been busy painting kalsomining, and remodelling the rooms for the candy kitchen. Cleanliness and sanitation are to be carefully preserved in the new kitchen, and as soon as it is completed the public is to be invited to inspect the shop.

AGENT PROVIDES SCARE FOR PILFERER OF MILK

An ancient trick nearly proved disastrous to the guilty person when Carl Olson, local Southern Pacific agent, undertook the other night to provide a first rate "scare" for the party who has been stealing milk bottles from local porches.

Mr. Olson tied a can to a milk bottle by means of a lengthy string, filled the bottle with sour milk to insure himself against loss, and set his noise trap on the porch. Nothing happened during the early part of the evening, but just after the family had retired the can rattled on the front porch. Having retired, Mr. Olson was unable to catch a glimpse of the visitor, but the next morning found the bottle on the front lawn where it had been hurriedly thrown as the visitor departed evidently in fright.
