

Washington College Professor Says Youth is Educated away from Farm

The American city is better press-agented, its advantages, real and supposed, more insinuatingly and potently set forth than any brand of pickles or cigarettes.

Some of the best young blood and brains is being drained off from the country to the city not only because of city dollars which look big and bright and abundant.

The trend is also chargeable to an idea—that somehow city life is happier, more successful, more stimulating in every way, and more worth while than country life.

Urbanism is lodged in America somewhat like militarism in German pre-war thought.

This comes from Dr. Paul Emerson Titsworth, president of Washington college, a little but first-grade institution at Chestertown, Maryland, who has sounded a new note in practical education which is now arousing national interest and attention. Educators, magazines, newspapers everywhere are rallying to Dr. Titsworth's idea.

Dr. Titsworth, in an article written says:

"The chair of country life proposes to help nurture a country set-of-mind. It will aim to divert a larger part of the human stream flowing through its doors into the land of growing promise—the small town and the open country.

"It will teach Washington college men and women the vital role rural life plays in world enterprise.

"The significance of rural life must become—shall I say it?—a country complex, that is, not only an idea to be respected but an idea charged with emotion, a way of life to be followed. It will not be enough to demonstrate that the wide-awake country preacher, doctor, lawyer, banker, editor, business man, and the farmer is a man to be reckoned with in the scheme of things, that he is making for himself a career shot through and through with and rewarded by all kinds of human satisfactions, including money; the chair of country life will aim to instill into promising youth a determined and enlightened purpose to live and work and play and serve in the country.

"Washington college does not aspire to become an agricultural institution, but it will strive to nurture a larger measure of clear-eyed, warm-hearted country citizenship."

Senior Play Postponed.

The play, "Tweedles," to be presented by the Springfield high school senior class, will be held on May 21 instead of the date originally announced, it was stated today by Miss Anne Hill, coach. May 21 is May day at the high school, and the play will be the final event of the festivities.

Memorial Committee Meets.

Z. T. Kintzley, marchal of the day a the observance to be held in Springfield on Memorial day, has called a meeting of his aides, F. B. Hamlin and John Will, to be held at Eggmann's store tonight. M. B. Huntly, president of the Memorial day committee will meet with them to plan features of the events, as will Mrs. C. F. Eggmann, president of the Ladies of the G. A. R.

Several Oregon farmers are already planning on building concrete pits for the manure from the dairy barn, where it may be stored in the winter months. Such a pit will soon pay for itself, the experiment station has found. The value of the plant food in the liquid manure when cows are in the barn one third of the time amounts to $5.00 per head if replaced in commercial fertilizers.

For a herd of 20 cows 130 sacks of cement with the proper amount of sand and gravel is required to construct a pit for 5 months. Such a pit has been found by the experiment station to pay for itself in a short time. Plans may be obtained for extension service.

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an execution issued out of the circuit Court of the State of Oregon, in and for Lane County, on the 16th day of April, 1926, upon a judgment rendered in said Court, on the 13th day of April, 1926, in the suit of Dora H. Peters against J. H. Bolin, Olive V. Bolin, J. W. Shumate, Lillian R. Travis, Fredericka Travis and Gould Bryan Travis, against the said J. H. Bolin and Olive V. Successors to SCHAEFERS BROS.

—Junetime is playtime for the boys and girls who will soon thrust aside the cares and worries of school-time and spend their energies in play—hard play at that. Therefore this brings forth worries and cares on the parents, wondering how they can best combat the ravages of wear which this energetic play always brings to the clothing of the girl or boy.

—The footwear being predominantly of greatest concern. They forget, for the moment perhaps, that Ax-Billy's shoes for the youngsters stand pre-eminently in the lead for wear.

—We have them in a good range of styles and patterns, in the most wanted leathers (as well as two-tone combinations), some for dress, some for play and some for hard wear. The prices are indeed attractively low, quality considered.
