Life's Mirror.
Reflections by Panzo.
O let me live that I may give
Some good to someone once
It may be to a tiny child
A doll that walks and talks;
Or to a good old kindly man
A pair of woolen socks;
It may be just a friendly smile,
Unconscious though it be,
But let me live to love the world,
And give the best of me.
If there is anything in this evolution stuff our oily rivers will develop some mighty fine species of sardines.

WILL PLAY THREE GAMES AS BENEFIT FOR HOLEMAN

The receipts of three games next Sunday will be given as a benefit to Hadley Holeman who broke his ankle playing on the Springfield nine in the game here last Sunday against Nott. The services of all the officers and players of the Upper Willamette Valley league will be donated to the injured player, according to an order of the league president, F. J. Sherman of Eugene.

The injury to Holeman marred the game here between Springfield and Nott. Holeman was sliding home after a bad throw to home plate and ran into catcher Orr of the Nott team. He caught his spikes on the home plate and turned his ankle, breaking both bones of the right leg a few inches above the ankle.

The injured man was immediately taken to the Pacific Christian hospital at Eugene and his leg set that evening. Local ball fans started a movement to give him a benefit game with the result that the receipts of the Springfield-Eugene, Cottage Grove-Nott, and Wendling-Harrisburg games will be placed to his credit.

In Confidence By Flo

Shouldn't My Husband Carry Insurance and Make A Will?

Dear Miss Flo:—My husband has always been a good provider, and seemingly has always been devoted to me. But he absolutely refuses to take out an insurance policy or make a will. The twelve years that we have been married we have worked shoulder to shoulder, and as a result we have a nice home, a bank account, and some bonds, which are, of course, in his name. I feel that anything we have is just as much mine as his. Yet if he were to die I would get only my portion as his widow. We have argued and argued about it. I know my husband would want me to have what he has and what I have helped to make just as much as he, but he can't bring himself to take out insurance or make a will. He always says, "plenty of time for that." What makes a man treat the woman he loves in that manner? Edna.

It is hard to say just what makes a man treat his wife in such a manner, Edna. It certainly is every man's duty to protect his wife by taking out insurance, and by making a will. The slightest sense of chivalry or justice should make him want to leave her protected against hardship and want. The husband who leaves his wife without home or financial protection must be callous indeed.

In some cases it is plain jealousy. It is a bitter and torturing thought to many men that their wives might marry again and their second husbands live in the home they have paid for—and enjoy the prosperity they have made. Apparently it does not occur to them that their wives have any real right to the money they have helped to make and save, or that any compensation is due her for spending her best years working for him.

A man who deliberately refrains from laying up something for his wife to have in case of his death is treating her most unfairly. He is defrauding her of what belongs to her by right. Any wife who does her part by making a man a comfortable home; who skimps and pinches to help him save and get along, has equal right to whatever they have. Her work has been just as valuable as his. She has contributed just as much as he to the family prosperity.

In your particular case it is obviously not lack of affection for you that keeps your husband from making a will, or taking out insurance. His statement, "plenty time for that," indicates that perhaps he lacks the courage necessary to face the fact that he must some day die. Perhaps he cannot bring himself to visualize his own end, as he must do when he makes or takes out insurance. Many men have this feeling, and as a result, when they die they leave their affairs in disorder—a really grievous wrong to their wives and children.

My advice to you is to have your house some evening in the very near future. Then have the insurance man call. All your husband needs is to have his courage facked up a little. He will be pleased as anything with himself when he finds the ordeal is over and he is still alive.

Maybe She Is.
