 Years ago when the big fort at Sullivan's Island, South Carolina, was being built, the foreman of a gang of workmen told a Negro carpenter to get a plank 10 1/2 inches by 15 feet.
 Seeing the Negro intently measuring with a rule he called loudly: "How long is that plank, Marsha?"
 Immediately came the answer, "I dunno, sab—dis ain't my rule."

Hank Silvertree rushed in the General Store and panted, "Got a rat trap Lem? I'm in a hurry, I want to catch a train!"

What Price Beauty?
 by Miss Flo

The Use of Cosmetics

Not so many years ago the use of make-up was considered a question of morals rather than one of beauty, and the woman or girl who dared use even a tiny bit of rouge was considered a "painted" person—and never a lady. Make-up today is obviously quite good form, but it is smart only when it is correctly applied.

Self knowledge is the root of all aspirants to beauty. Know your type and make-up accordingly. While there are many who need a little make-up and will not use it—there is still a greater proportion who do not need it—and insist upon using it. If you belong to the class who should never touch it—either because you have sufficient coloring of your own, or because nature didn't intend you to have color—don't use it. If you belong to the class that obviously does need it—use it—but be sure that you select the proper shades and that you do not overdo it. When not used in moderation, the effect is theatrical rather than beautifying. Experiment until you know just what added touch you need, and why you need it. As to the shade, almost all good rouges and lipsticks are made in from two to four tones, for fair blondes, dark blondes, brunettes and Spanish types.

The dark blonde—the type who has light hair, brown or hazel eyes, and a complexion more dusky than milky, looks wonderful with a very dark lipstick, or even one of those lipsticks that verge on the brown. She can use a good deal of rouge—much more than the true blonde—and she should use brunette powder. This gives her skin a creamy, sun-kissed appearance, and makes her eyes darker still. Contrary to almost all other types of blondes, she can use eye make-up to advantage.

The white brunette—who has dark hair and a light skin must play up her skin above everything else. It is the thing that distinguishes her from the brunette sister. She doesn't really need rouge at all, but if she uses it, she must use clear tones. She looks very good with scarlet lips.

If you are an "in-between" type only by experimenting can you decide your shade. Remember that your lipstick and rouge must always match.

MODERN GIRL WISER SAYS PRESIDENT'S WIFE
UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene. — (Special) — The girl of today is wiser than the "flapper" of a generation ago, believes Mrs. Arnold Bennett Hall, who is an admirer of the modern girl, according to her first interview with students today.

Mrs. Hall likes the frankness and wide range of general knowledge of the modern girl as she sees "no virtue in ignorance." Outspokenness and the candid opinions of the girl of today make up a wholesome attitude, she believes.

The college woman has changed very little since the last generation, according to Mrs. Hall, who pointed out that the days when she attended Franklin College in Indiana the older generation criticized youth just as it does today. Speed, and its consequent effect on social life, constitutes the only difference between the two periods, Mrs. Hall said.

Whether or not women go into business or devote themselves to homemaking is a matter of personal ability, Mrs. Hall believes, although it is rarely a woman possesses qualities for both.

"Women today have the same opportunity as the men in regard to leadership," Mrs. Hall said, "whereas a few years ago only teaching and domestic service was open to them."

OREGON MEETS HUSKIES AT PORTLAND SATURDAY
UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Oct. 7. — (Special) — The critics of the 1926 football season for the University of Oregon coaching staff and football team will be over within a week. The big game of the year is scheduled next Saturday against the University of Washington in the new Portland Civic Stadium.

The outcome of this clash will clearly demonstrate the degree of success the former Army men have registered in the Pacific coast conference. If Oregon wins or holds the 1926 championship to a close score, the new system brought by Captain John J. McEwan, ex-West Point coach and his aides, Harry Ellinger and Gene Vidal, will be vindicated, and Oregon will be back in her old place in the sun where the great teams developed by Hugo Boddeker placed her.

McEwan has selected three Oregon standbys to assist the coaching staff. Bill Hayward, veteran trainer, is again nursing the boys through charley horses and kindred ailments prevalent among football players. Bob Mautz, former Oregon captain, is in charge of the ends, and endeavoring to impart his own fighting ability to his proteges. "Spike" Leslie, 1925, freshman coach, is helping Ellinger with the line, and handling the third varsity.
