FARMERS' UNION HEARS CANDIDATES AND ISSUES

Election issues came to the front at the quarterly meeting of the Lane County Farmers Union conducted at Eugene Chamber of Commerce last Friday.

A committee reported its findings on various issues, and they were adopted without dissent by the unionists.

In the report, the members were urged to distinguish between the Grange-Farmers Union income tax bill and the property offset bill, it being alleged the latter measure was introduced to kill the former. The "Dennis resolution" was condemned as wholly vicious. A. R. Shumway and Bert Haney for U. S. senate were endorsed but the latter not recommended. Bailey was approved for state senator.

Speakers at the meeting were J. M. Hutson, a representative of motor bus interests; Mrs. G. B. Jones, state union secretary; State President Ebert of The Dalles. B. H. Brobham and T. W. Carney were appointed to investigate proposed tuberculosis testing legislation.

HOME POINTERS

(Home Economics Dep't O. A. C.) Attractive lamp shades are made by first covering the frame with a figured material and then stretching over it georgette or chiffon of a plain color. Such shades are not difficult to make and are good now.

The "Dolman" sleeve is good this fall. A dark dress is brightened up and changed by inserting this type of sleeve in contrasting material. Figured metal brocade is especially attractive with black or navy blue material.

Sofa cushions for the parlor, bedroom, or sunparlor, quilted of tafetas or of English prints are the latest style. A great variety of patterns and colors are available in English prints, and they make up surprisingly attractive.

Embroidered hats are still good. Bright colored designs and stitchings worked up on velvet or duvetyen hats prove attractive and popular this fall. Both large and small hats are worn, but the small styles are the most popular.

Women Lost

On Saturday of last week two ladies of Eugene who had come to Pleasant Hill to purchase apples were returning by the Pleasant Hill Creswell road when they decided to stop near the Phelps ranch and wander in the woods. One of the ladies became tired and sat on a stump to rest while the other went a little further into the timber. When she turned back to join her friend she took the wrong trail and after wandering for some time she realized she was lost. She wandered until dark in the timber and then seeing a dim light in the distance she turned her foot steps toward it.

After crossing fields and roads she came to the place of Jack Williams, Mr. Williams immediately came to her rescue and with his help they located the sedan in which the ladies had been riding but could not find the other lady. Going to another farm house they got a lantern and started for the woods on a hopeless hunt but when they again came to the car the other lady was there waiting. She in turn had seen a light and gotten to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawson, so what might have been a very serious incident turned into a humorous one.

BEE MANAGEMENT IS IMPORTANT SAY EXPERTS

Oregon bees will successfully pass the winter, says the experiment station bee specialists, if they have ample stores, sufficient protection and a large force. Fifty pounds of honey are not too much for the average hive, and 3 pounds of young bees are about right. The latter factor is very important. Three pounds of bees are about 15,000 individuals. These numbers refer only to the young bees since the old bees soon die and it is the young bees and the queen which live over until spring. To provide this force of young bees it is necessary to have the colony headed by a choice young queen, preferably of Italian stock.

"Kill the overwintering hessian fly in Oregon by plowing under the infested field," says the experiment station, in Station circular 77. This wheat pest causes heavy damage to late fall-sown and spring-sown wheat in the Willamette valley, where the stubble was not deeply buried by fall plowing. The stubble contains in the "flaxseeds" on the straw or in the volunteer wheat all the hessian flies that will deliver a spring attack on late fall-sown and spring-sown wheat.

If field-selected seed corn is not stored in a dry, well ventilated place in non-freezing temperature it might as well not be picked, says the experiment station. It needs protection weather and mice to insure good condition at seeding time.

George Melvin Miller Says New Bridge on National Road

The new Springfield-Eugene inter-city bridge is described as a link in a great development program which is to provide the chief northwest feeder to the Lincoln highway, the "Main street of the nation," in a statement made this week by George Melvin Miller, realtor and good roads booster of Eugene, in support of the proposed $75,000 bonds on which Lane County will vote November 2.

The potential value of this enterprise, made possible through a $75,000 appropriation by the State Highway Commission, is clearly drawn by Mr. Miller. He says:

"The highway of which this bridge is a link is no ordinary thoroughfare. It is a transcontinental federal aid highway, so designated on all late official maps by insignia 'US28'."

"With the bridge down stream in the direct line of traffic it will attract more travel. The McKenzie Pass eventually will be kept open for all winter traffic and the entire road widened to 30 or 120 feet. This pass affords now the only direct military opening across the state south of the Columbia gorge.

"Lane county should rejoice and cheerfully cooperate in such a thoroughfare, and at once provide right-of-way of any width the U. S. engineers require.

"The road which crosses this bridge is the chief northwest feed to the Lincoln highway, the greatest highway on the globe. Moving the bridge downstream will save approximately 2 1/2 cents on every vehicle which crosses the river at this point.

"In event of foreign war, or the blockade of the Columbia gorge by slides, as has occurred, enormous traffic is likely to be thrown upon this bridge on short notice, so it should be built wide and strong. The McKenzie Highway is rapidly becoming a scenic competitor of the Columbia, and also a relief to the latter congestion. Tourists who now drive up the Columbia and return by the same route soon will be going south by the Dalles-California Highway to return to Western Oregon via the McKenzie Pass and the Pacific Highway.

"When the Roosevelt Highway is completed from Florence, south, thousands of cars from Canada, Montana and the Dakotas will reach winter climate in California via the Yellowstone park, Pocatello, Boise and the Central Oregon highway over McKenzie Pass to the coast. In fact, the McKenzie Pass is the logical gateway to the great Inland Empire from Lane County and the latter should do everything in its power to make it serviceable to the public.

"Springfield should be deeply interested because it is on the direct line of traffic between this Inland Empire and deep water at Florence. Springfield is only 498 miles from San Francisco by truck and water, which fact is likely to give the new bridge still more traffic."
