BANKERS OPPOSE POWER BILL BEFORE CONGRESS

Opposition to what they term an effort to engage the United States Government in the electric power business was expressed by the Investment Bankers Association of America at a meeting of the Board of Governors, held in Chicago January 19, in a resolution condemning the Swing Johnson Bill now pending in Congress, which proposes the construction by the Government of a high dam in the Colorado River at Boulder Canyon, Colorado, under the guise of flood protection. The resolution, adopted unanimously, follows:

Resolved, by the Board of Governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America, at a meeting held at Chicago, Illinois, on the 19th day of January, 1927, that the Investment Bankers Association of America reaffirms its opposition to proposed legislation now pending before the Federal Congress, known as the Swing Johnson Bill, because:

One. While the measure is represented as primarily for flood control and reclamation on the Colorado River, yet it is in fact a proposal to have the Government enter into the electric power business, involving Government ownership and operation of a large power plant.

Two. The bill departs from the already established national policy contained in the Federal Water Power Act for the handling of power questions by the Federal Power Commission by granting licenses to private enterprise for the use of water for power purpose under the Federal Water Power act.

Three. Full and adequate flood protection and water supply can be provided by construction costing much less than will be required to build the proposed high dam at Boulder Canyon.

And further resolved, that a copy of this resolution be sent to the rules committee of the House of Representatives now considering the question of a special rule for said Bill. "Signed Pliny Jewell, President, Investment Bankers Association of America, Allen H. Little, Executive Secretary."
