MANY HOMESEKERS LOOK TOWARD OREGON

February set a good pace for the year in land settlement by bringing 32 new settlers to Oregon farms with an investment of $107,484. That is the record of the Land Settlement department of the State and Portland Chambers of Commerce as shown in their monthly report just issued.

During the month the department received 2539 letters and inquiries. Out of 201 questionnaires returned by farmers, 161 stated that the writers intended to come to Oregon to locate during the coming year. They specify capital available for immediate investment amounting to $469,100.

Letters numbering 6316 together with 2495 packages of literature were sent to the prospective settlers during February.

Poultry raising appeals to many of those who contemplate coming to Oregon. Augusta A. Webb of Indianapolis, Indiana, has furnished the names of three prospective poultrymen now living in Indiana.

W. H. Armstrong, a Michigan farmer, is interested with a group of his neighbors in coming in the near future to build up chicken farms. Oregon's mild winters present a strong lure to these people wearying of the cold.

Two Pennsylvania farmers, Robert E. Bates and Miss Elsie F. Hollman, each have several thousand dollars ready to invest in Oregon lands. Poultry raising on a ten acre tract is the goal of Mr. Bates, while Miss Hollman seeks a dairying and stock raising county where good fishing and hunting are available.

Every day brings a number of farm seekers to the office of the Land Settlement department according to W. G. Ide, manager. 283 inquiries having called during February. Illustrated booklets and thorough information on the various sections of the state are furnished to all these prospective landowners. Many of them are in Oregon for the first time, while many others have visited the state previously and are now here to locate permanently.

Harold—"Your speedometer shows you have gone 25,000 miles. Been taking long trips?"

Jim—"No, the 5,000 is the distance I have covered going back and forth to the office, and the other 20,000 is the distance I have covered looking for parking spaces."

MARCH SEES INCREASE OF NORTHWEST EMPLOYMENT

Portland, March 10.—(Special)—Compared with last month at this time employment in general throughout the Pacific Northwest has shown a substantial increase, although employment levels in various industries are not so high as they were in March 1926, according to the 4L employment letter published here. The letter points out that there are fewer night shifts at work in either fir or pine sawmills than was the case one year ago. Reports to the 4L office from some of the more important employment centers of the Northwest were as follows:

Portland—Fewer unemployed here than in February. Reopening of several logging camps has helped the situation. Lumber production normal.

Raymond—South Bend, Wn.—More resident labor now unemployed than has been the case at any time in three years. Logging about 60 per cent active. Sawmill industry also on a slow bell.

Aberdeen—Hoquiam, Wn.—Logging about 70 per cent active. Several shingle mills and cedar camps down on account of shingle weavers strike. Clamming season in full swing with hundreds employed on the beaches and in factories.

Tacoma—More men than jobs here. All but one sawmill operating. Major logging camps busy. Labor turnover light.

Seattle—Logging is this district 85 per cent normal capacity. Railroads putting some extra gangs to work. Number of unemployed has decreased in the past month.

Spokane—Pine sawmill activity in the Inland Empire gradually increasing. Woods work is at season's peak. Log driving will be earlier than usual. Unemployed here fewer than in February.

Klamath Falls, Ore.—Most of the major sawmills here are still down. Few camps running. Large surplus of both skilled and unskilled help in this district.

Customer—"Are you quite sure this suit won't shrink if it gets wet on me?"

Clothier—"Mine friend, every fire company in the city has squirted water on dat suit."
