VILMA BANKY APPEARS AS "BARBARA WORTH"

Vilma Banky, one of Europe's recent and beautiful contributions to America's cinematic world, appears to have become thoroughly Americanized, for she appears as "Barbara Worth," an American girl, in "The Winning of Barbara Worth," which plays at the Bell Theatre next Sunday and Monday.

Miss Bankey has been an English girl, a Russian beauty, and a French dancing girl in Arabia, in her three previous screen appearances in America, with Ronald Colman and Rudolph Valentino.

Prior to her American film debut Miss Banky was known as "the most beautiful blonde on the European screen" appearing in pictures for U. F. A., famous continental production company. She was working in "Should I Marry" during the European tour of Mr. Goldwyn, which resulted in her contract for her American work.

Goldwyn was enthusiastic over Miss Banky's possibilities and persuaded her to forsake her continental laurels for a new start before the cameras of Hollywood. She left her native Hungary and arrived in this country a little over a year ago.

What Price Beauty? by Miss Flo

HEY FELLERS! HOMELINESS IS AN ASSET!

Dear Miss Flo:— I am a young man—not at all good looking, and I am not at all popular with girls. As a result, I spent most of my time alone and never have any good times like other fellows I know.

Do you think it is because I am so homely? I am crazy about a very pretty girl—but she is so lovely and so attractive to other men that I am afraid to even make an attempt to become better acquainted with her...

The fact that you are not good looking has absolutely nothing to do with your unpopularity with women—because, as a matter of fact, few women admire pretty men. In truth, they rather resent a man who is better looking, because they feel that beauty is a prerogative that belongs solely to the feminine sex, and that man is infringing in their own particular field when he is good looking. They want to be the picture of their own particular domicile.

So the man who knows himself to be unattractive physically need not retire and live the life of a recluse. He can cultivate other attractions of manners and conversation and personality that enables him to be so fascinating no feminine heart can resist him.

He will never attract anybody, however if he permits himself to feel inferior because of his appearance.

In this respect at least, women have more intelligence or a better sense of value than men have. A man will marry a girl for no other good reason than that she has a peaches and cream complexion, naturally curly hair, or a willowy figure, but not many women want a husband whose only charm is a face with perfect features and a physique that en-
