

PHILIP WAGNER DIES AT CAMP CREEK HOME

One of Lane county's pioneers passed May 27 when Philip Wagner, 83, died at his Camp Creek residence.

Mr. Wagner came to Oregon with a wagon train in 1858. Soon after his arrival he moved to the Pleasant Hill district, and later to Camp Creek.

He is survived by his wife, Anne, and three sons, Edwin and M. R. of Camp Creek and Orval P. of Salem.

McKELVEY IS JAILED ON LIQUOR CHARGES

Accused in a warrant of possession of liquor, W. H. McKelvey was arrested in Springfield Saturday and turned over to county authorities.

McKelvey is 19 years old and a resident of West Springfield.

Outside of this case, the Memorial Day week-end passed quietly so far as crime was concerned in Springfield. No serious accidents were reported.

"I'll talk to you when you're sober." "But, Mary, you won't be interested in me when you're that old."

One's Enough for Anybody

"That son of yours certainly has got a will of his own." "Yes, that's why I'm cutting him out of mine."

Exception To The Rule

"I have always maintained," argued Mr. Newlywed, "that no two people on earth think alike." "You'll change your mind," said the wife, "when you look over our wedding presents."

What Price Beauty? by Miss Flo

PARENTS SHOULD READ THIS

Dear Miss Flo:— Don't you think it unfair for a young girl's parents to insist upon staying up—when she has guests—until they leave? Our home is quite small, and we have only one room in which we can entertain, and my family insists upon remaining with us. That is all right, but on other nights they retire early. When I have company they monopolize the conversation, and as a result I have few friends who want to come to see me. Then if I go to parties or dances when I have a date, they object because I stay out late. What can I do about it? L. L.

Why not have a perfectly frank talk with your parents, and tell them that the young people call to see you and not them. Tell them they are queering your chances, as undoubtedly they are, for too much family will prove a handicap too much for any girl to carry in the modern race for popularity.

Of course the older people do not realize they bore the younger ones. It never dawned on father that young Johnny didn't put that extra layer of polish on his hair and don his best Sunday suit for the sole purpose of listening to him talk about the state of the hardware business or to things that happened when he was a youngster; or, to his opinion of the present political situation and how this League of Nations business should be settled.

Nor does it ever occur to mother that that nice Smith boy is yawning his head off because he is bored to death with her babbling about the price of groceries and what her second child said when it was three years old.

Heavens—no wonder the younger generation rushes away to parties and dances!

And mother and father can't realize that it is their lack of understanding that drives their son or daughter out evenings when they might be spending their evening at home. For it is the lack of a room in which they may be free to make merry—where they will not be constantly reminded that they are making too much noise and that it is too late to play the victrola that sends them out on the street, to go where they can have a good time without bothering anybody.

Nothing so surely kills the spontaneity of youth as the presence of older persons. And of course it isn't that the young desire to do or say anything to which the censorious and critical older person could possibly object. It is just that they are at the age where they want to talk and act silly—they are at the age where they want to giggle and skylark, and they can't do it in the presence of their elders. They becoming self-conscious and tongue-tied, knowing that father or mother is there with their assumed superior air and disapproving attitude.

And if father and mother want their daughter to be an old maid they find no surer method of achieving their purpose than by sitting with her company. And that isn't maybe for love's young dream has to have a proper environment if it is to flourish. It must have solitude, with the knowledge that nobody is within eyeshot or that nobody is listening in. Many a man fails to propose because he never finds the opportunity in which to pop the question.

No Mystery

A ukulele and fifty victrola records were stolen from a room in Hartley Hall, a Columbia College dormitory. All those in neighboring rooms have perfect alibis.

SELECTIN ANND CARE OF SHOES SUBJECT OF NEW BULLETIN

Leather shoes have received much attention from scientists in the United States Department of Agriculture who are engaged in a study of leather and its uses. In studying the suitability of different leathers for footwear considerable has been learned about the selection of shoes and the care of footwear so that it will give the maximum service. With this information the department has issued Farmer's Bulletin No. 1523-F, Leather Shoes: Selection and care.

An interesting discussion is presented on the different types of shoes and their construction. The principal types of sewed shoes are known as "welted," "McKay," or "turned," according to the method of attaching the soles to the uppers. Those that are put together by wood or metal fasteners are called "pegged," "nailed," or "standard-screw" shoes.

The service to which a shoe is to be put is an important factor in selecting footwear. Particular attention is given in this bulletin to a description of the different kinds of leathers used in shoes and their relative value.

To be comfortable, safe, durable, and attractive, shoes for everyday wear must conform to the natural shape of the feet and protect them, says the department. They must also provide a firm foundation for the body. The well-known Army shoe meets these requirements. Proceeding on the theory that an army is "only as good as its feet", the War Department, after a lengthy study, worked out the type of shoe worn by the United States soldiers and Army nurses. Civilian shoes made along the same lines, but of lighter-weight material and more pleasing appearance, can now be obtained in most parts of the United States. They are well adapted for everyday wear in city and country alike.

The proper care of footwear, coupled with its intelligent selection, means a reduction of from one-quarter to one-half in shoes bills and at the same time keeps the feet neatly and serviceably shod. Good care includes prompt repairing. It is never true economy to wear down-at-the-heel dilapidated shoes. Such shoes neither protect the feet nor properly support the body. What might be saved in leather may be paid eventually to foot specialists and doctors. If the necessary bit of repairing is put off the shoes may be so badly worn that it no longer is worth mending and from $2 to $5 will be lost by neglect.
