FARM REMINDERS

Oregon farmers are not behind their brethren in other parts of the United States in the use of electricity on their farms and in their farm homes, reports the experiment station. In Oregon horticulture electricity has been used in dehydration of prunes and nuts. The design of dehydrators has been vastly improved in the last few years and the capacity approximately doubled by the recirculation system.

Irrigation of prunes in Douglas county conducted by Huron Clough of Canyonville obtained on 20 acres an increase estimated at $1000 in two seasons and $600 in a third. The prunes were larger in size and brought a higher price. A number of prune growers in the same district are reported as having succeeded with irrigation.

"Clover mildew has come to Oregon to stay," says H. P. Barsz plant pathologist of the Oregon experiment station. "Infections in southern and eastern Oregon, especially in the irrigated sections have caused many inquiries for the clover mildew treatment. Application of dusting sulphur will kill mildew. In most cases this is not necessary until after the first mowing."
