REST

Rest is the cure of many complaints—and is within the reach of every man and woman; the trouble is, we do not treat the subject with intelligence.

Since my last letter to this pa-per, I note the deaths of two disper, I note the deaths of two dis-tinguished men; one a statesman nationally known, 65—and the other a politician of state-wide no-toriety. 67. Both endowed with all that make for long life; neither knew how to rest. Neither of knew how to rest. Neither of these men used the muscular body one hour out of the twenty-four; both burned the nerve-candle to the vanishing-point. Neither knew the meaning of mental or digestive rest. The newspaper diagnosis was, of course, "heart disease."

When shall we learn that, the nervous and digestive systems are the universally overwrought of the body? Our digestive apparatus, which is really governed otherwise, needs rest, must have it: otherwise, food swallowed is ab-sorbed without digesting, hence is at once poisonous to the heart and brain. A spurt of protracted over-mental-work, and, the curtain goes down. Heart-disease!!!

Some men practically never al-low the nervous system to rest; especially is this true of the more brilliant of men and women. They love work—revel in accomplish-ment, and—die before their time. Eating too much and toiling with the brain incessantly, affords the most certain passport to the great

ORDER FOR HEARING

CON

IN THE MATTER OF THE ADOP- number of intelligent girls at school." NER, By George H. Turner and Musette Turner.

This matter coming on for hearing upon the petition of George H. Turner and Musette Turner praying for the adoption of a male child of the age of one year and of unknown parentage, and for a change of the name of said child to Thomas James Turner, and that the Judge of the above entitled Court be appointed to act in these proceedings as next friend of said child and that notice of hearing of said petition be given to the parents of said child by publication;

It appearing to the Court, and the Court finds that the mother and father of said child are unknown and that there is no way of ascertaining who is the mother of said child or who is his next of kin and that he has no guardian in this state; and that the Court should proceed herein as though said child had no parent living, and no guardian or next of kin in this

Now therefore, it is hereby ordered that the Hon. C. P. Barnard be, and he is hereby, appointed to act as next friend of the said child in the above entitled matter and that he may give or withold his consent to such adoption in loco parentis; and it is further ordered that the said petition be heard before this Court in the County Court Room in the Lane County Court House, in Eugene, Oregon on the 24th day of September 1927; and that a copy of this order be served upon the unknown parents of said child by publishing a copy thereof once a for three successive weeks in the Springfield News, the last publication to be at least four weeks before the

"Cedar Swamp"

Into the minds of the judge, the jury and the spectators seeped the belief that the story he told was, in the main particulars false. They reasoned that the prosecutor's theory must be the correct one. In the cold light of day his Quixotic defense of another, even at the possible expense of his own freedom, did not seem logical.

They went a step further. If. by any chance he was telling the truth he had an unworthy motive, and not a worthy one, for keeping the name of his companion a secret. His courtship of Nance Encell was remembered. Their friendliness since his marriage, innocent though it was, had been a subject of comment in town. So-was the next step in their minds -if he wasn't driving the truck, then he was joyriding around with that Encell girl while his poor little wife was at home.

The jury brought in a verdict of "Guilty." Interpreted, it really meant "Guilty on appearance and general principles." In a scathing arraignment that lasted for 20 minutes, Judge Randolph Parsons sentenced Edison Forbes to from 5 to 15 years in the state penitentiary at Jackson.

Edison made the few hours' trip to the prison city in a daze of misery. The deputy sheriff in whose charge he was, Linus Beal, was a school-time triend. He sympathized deeply with the prisoner and respected his trazic bewilderment. He did not insist on sitting with Edison. He realized that his prisoner preferred to be alone.

The outstanding thought in Edison's mind was that he had been a fool, a crackbrained, overgenerous fool, in protecting one who could not be saved by protection. And one who did not appreciate his sacrifice. The cowardly note the morning after the accident proved that. So did the young man's avoidance of him since his arrest. His thoughts ran: "If I had known they'd convict me, I would have told who was with me."

The train puffed into Jackson. Beal signaled a taxicab. They were driven to the prison whose sinister walls towered above the railway tracks. Edison shuddered as they passed within the gateway of discolored wray stone. The whole place seemed to recover slowly from the recent siege of wet weather. There were puddles in the worn flags of the foot walk. The ivy dripped as it clung to the cold stone barriers. There was the fectants, both depressing and degrad-

Linus received a receipt for his prisoner and went away after a silent handclasp. His mouth twitched with emotion so that he dared attempt no word. The clerk in charge had barely started on Edison's pedigree when the warden entered.

"Never mind, Jerry," he said to the And then to Edison: "Yes. sir."
