TRAFFIC FIGURES LARGE

Twenty-seven hundred cars a day are said to have passed over the old Springfield bridge this summer. That should be sufficient reason for hurrying the construction of the new bridge.

We hate to mention it—but we are of the opinion the Prince of Wales is a trifle jealous of President Coolidge—judging from the different costumes he has already been photographed in since landing in Quebec.

New York girl pawns her papa's pants to buy drinks for her boy friend—which means, we suppose, that there's nothing left for father to do but to try out for the track team.

Now that flying from ship board to shore is proven practical, there will be a lot of seasick passengers trying to mail themselves home—special delivery.

The man with real values in the merchandise he is selling does not have to stick his foot between the partly opened door and the jamb.

Rats are used as the medium of exchange in the Island of Hao in the Mid-Pacific. If a man has sufficient of them he can buy a wife.

So many thread-bare overcoats would not be seen in the fall if more people decided to spend their vacations "just inside their incomes."

Well—everything has been said and done at Geneva. We mean said.

Well at least—Chicago is turning from machine guns to boxing gloves. Civilization advances.

WOOLEN MILL EMINENCE (Oregon Voter)

Oregon is the only far western state as to which manufacture of woollen goods is segregated in the U. S. Census of Manufactures. The production credited to Oregon for 1923, the year of the census, is $5,107,730.

While Oregon has a favorable climate for production of woollen goods, so has Washington and so have several other states. The fact that production in this line has attained such notable proportions in Oregon must be credited to the enterprise of the men who engaged in the woollen mill business, both the pioneers of the industry and those who have carried on, sustaining and expanding it.

factured in Oregon are marketed in other states. Development of these distant markets, in competition with woollen mills close to them, reflects struggle, daring, enterprise and also skill in manufacturing.

A recent example of enterprise was made possible through co-operation of Portland's police department, which permitted a traffic officer to rush his motorcycle down the Columbia highway to Astoria to catch an outbound ship with samples and a bid asked for by cable just after the ship left Portland. By quick action of the manufacturer and the patriotic attitude of the department the samples and bid reached Manila just in time to land a fine order from the Philippines.

Oregon woollen mills are owned in Oregon, mainly by the men who are managing them, although the public has demonstrated its interest in the industry by absorbing securities of some of the mills. These securities have proven to be a good investment, thanks to the competence of the officers and directors of the mill corporations.

Not only do Oregon woollen mills provide a considerable pay roll, representing a distribution of wages to more than a thousand operatives, but it also provides a home market for Oregon-grown wool. Owners of residence property who sell or rent, merchants, professional people, movie houses, newspaper publishers—these and all the rest of us who live in Oregon derive benefit from success of enterprising men who have developed the woollen mill industry in our state.

RESULTS ARE WHAT COUNT

Discussion has been going on recently in the press about George Bernard Shaw's remark that a woman ought to be a mother in order to be a good teacher.

This remark was made opposing the tendencies in many places to have only unmarried teachers. Many educators have expressed themselves upon one side or the other of this question.

After all it is merely a point of view. One side looks at the question as to whether a woman can do a good job of teaching or not.

The other side looks at the question as to whether the woman ought to have the place or not with the salary attached.

In many places of business a job is looked upon as a sort of special privilege and certain classes are favored in giving jobs out, such as world war veterans, old people, unmarried people and so on.

If a man can do the business, or a woman either, what difference does it make whether he or she is married or not or young or old?

What most people want in business is results. Who attains them or how they are attained is a matter of indifference so long as it is done honestly.

I remember once that a presiding elder in the Methodist church gave as his reason for sending a man to a certain place the following:

"If I send that man it will kill the place and if I don't send him it will kill him, so between the two I will send him and save the man."

This is a good example of care for the individual ranking above care for his work. Every man must be judged by the kind of work he does and not by whether he is deserving of the job or not.

The other side of civil service is to select men competent for the position, and not to give the positions out to certain groups of men.

In considering an applicant for a job, common sense tells us to consider his ability to perform the duties of that business and not his ability in some other direction.

A president of the United States or the mayor of a city should be selected because he is capable of performing the duties of his office, and whether he was a good handshaker and baby kisser or not has nothing to do with the case, in reality, although in politics it has much to do with it.
