TWO PICTURES OF THE WOMAN OF TOMORROW

In a recent interview, Mme. Alexandra Killantay, the Soviet Minister to Mexico, said:

"The modern woman, the self-supporting professional woman, cannot allow love to take first place in her life. The modern woman is learning to subdue her emotions to reason, to master her tenderer feelings and to put business and work before sentiment. There will be no flappers, because flappers are drones. There will be no Don Juans, or Lord Byrons, for the simple reason that women will not have time for them."

Now, all of us will be struck by a certain hollowness in these observations and the lack of an understanding of human nature, but the thing that interests us particularly is just how men will react to this new specimen of womanhood.

What is the ideal woman in the American man's mind? Is she the successful, independent business woman who can turn a deal with the best of her male competitors? Is she a candidate for a political office? Is she the author of the year's best seller? Is she a career-seeker in any of the many branches open to the women of America today?

Or is she the woman of charm and grace, ministering tenderly, devotedly to the needs of her home, her husband and her children—and putting love before everything else?

Another Picture

Another important interview was given about the same time by Senor Alejandro Cesar, Nicaraguan minister to the United States. He said:

"The ideal woman of Nicaragua is not the governor of a state. She is not photographed casting her ballot for public officials, nor is she the head of a real estate firm. No ballot or political career can help her to be more than she is today—a charming figure on a moonlit balcony—a rose in her hair and a great love in her heart."

The balcony and the rose are figures of speech—to Americans at least colorful, yes—but not essential in the ideal woman of the American man. The picture painted in colors deep down in the heart of every man—regardless of his country—is the picture of the home-maker. That is the ideal that he cultivates.

Who wants to live in a world where there are no gay, irresponsible, laughing little flappers—even if they are drones? Perhaps the flapper of today is too frivolous, possible she is wayward and unable to concentrate seriously on any great subject—not that we believe that—but even if it were so, isn't she preferable to the humorless grind conceived by Mme. Killantay? Who would want to live in a world where women are so intent on their struggle for economic independence that they had no inclination to listen to the pretty speeches under the moon?

Try This Test—Maybe Isn't the picture presented by Senor Alejandro Cesar a far more inviting one?

To get a little light on the subject you might ask your male relatives—or, if you have a husband, ask him. Ask him whether he would have you leaning over the moonlit balcony or over the executive desk. My belief is that if you are the woman with a great love in your heart you will be told you are perfectly satisfactory as you are. But if you are a woman with your whole heart in your career, placing love second to it, perhaps it will be wiser not to ask any questions at all. For you might put notions in your husband's head that life was cheating him of something that he might find elsewhere were he to look for it.

For romance is still Piece de Resistance to the average man and woman.

FINAL EXHIBITIONS ARE GIVEN BY DRILL TEAM

An exhibition of the work to be put on by the Springfield group at Riverside, California, September 15, was given at last night's meeting of the Neighbor's of Woodcraft by the drill team. One more meeting remains before the drill team goes south.

Mrs. Merle Woods was voted on as a new member last night. Initiation will be conducted at next meeting.

PRESENTING

The Early Arrivals in

Fall Coat Fashions

$12.50 to $29.50

—Confident that there is style-rightness in the very first fashions of a new season appearing at Brill's, many women elect to choose their fall coats as early as this.

—Preparedness for the initial cold nip is not the only gain, of course, for there is pleasure in knowing that one is among the first to own a model of brand new fashion.

—And these are coats that women who are exacting will wear with pride. A nice jauntiness characterizes the majority of them, while others have a dress-occasion elegance. All in all, a collection that you will enjoy looking over.

—You'll certainly be captivated when you see the rich plaid creations and those in rich warm shades of autumn tans and browns, also beautiful blue tones. Their luxurious fur collars and cuffs enhance their effectiveness.
