She is the Average Woman

And there is nothing unusual in her appearance. She may be good looking, well dressed and well taken care of. Or she may be plainly dressed, she may have a tired face and workworn hands-the sort of woman that you meet a hundred times a day with-Date of first publication the 21st out giving her second glance or a thought.

Years ago, when she was fresh and young, and gay, and light-hearted, she married, and her head was full of dreams. Her husband was always to remain a Prince Charming and life itself was to be a fairy tale.

But one by one the dreams fell away. The husband was a good man, but he grew indifferent to her before long, as husbands have a way of doing. He ceased to notice when she put on a new dress-he never paid her the compliments for which a woman's soul hungers.

Day after day she cooked and cleaned and mended to make a comfortable home. If the husband was not one of the fortunate few who have the gift of making money it was up to her to see that the wolf was kept away from the door. And women know the worse of poverty. For it is the wife. who has the spending of the insuffibitter ways of scimping and paring and saving. The husband must make the children, so the heaviest of all the deprivations fall upon the woman.

But she never falters in her selfsacrifice. And in this she is only like the millions of other Average Women who cook and sew and pinch and economize, to do the best they can for their loved ones.
