UPPER WILLAMETTE

Much interest was shown by the patrons of Union High school No. 1 of Pleasant Hill last week in the county basketball tournament that was held Thursday, Friday and Saturday, at the Y. M. C. A. building in Eugene. The Pleasant Hill boys won the Class B championship for the second consecutive year and will have two beautiful cups to display in their building. The tournament was a close one and proved to be very exciting. Thursday Pleasant Hill won from Santa Clara by a good majority. Saturday they played a very sensational game with Walker, winning the game in the last 5 seconds of play, making the score 25 to 24.

Their hardest game was played Saturday night when they met Coburg. At the end of the first quarter the score was 9 to 1 in favor of Coburg, but during the second quarter the Pleasant Hill boys settled down to business and the score stood 20 to 12 in their favor by the end of the half. Coburg once again got the lead, but a succession of 3 baskets made by Pleasant Hill by using the hook pass brought the final score to 26 for Pleasant Hill and 28 for Coburg. Many of the players played their last game of high school basketball. They are Donald Kabler, Jerry Kabler, Carl Linton, Clarence Monson and Lyman Tinker. Next year Prof. E. E. stream's edge. She saw at once that he was furiously angry, so angry that he could not permit himself to utter a word. She took his hand.

He seized her hungrily, and they clung together for several moments while the calming, soothing influences swept through them. At length he released her with an explosive sigh. They had not kissed.

"Well, that is over," he said. "Burton, oh, blessed one, if it had not been for you I should have killed them both as they sat there. But I just kept thinking that he was your father."

"I know," she soothed him. "I feel with you in every bit of it, whether he is my father or not. But let's not talk about it or we shall just be crazy angry again, and that will do us no good."

"Where do you get your wisdom, Burton?" he asked her, and smiled.

At the smile she clapped her hands.

"That's better!" she cried. "Now we can talk about it. What are we to do?"

"There's one thing I'm not going to do," he stated with conviction, "no matter what the price to pay; I'm not going to permit this scheme of destruction!"

"How can it be stopped?" she asked.

"Let's be practical."

"For one thing, I can refuse to give them my formulae."

"And lose all you own and go to jail besides, as father told you," she pointed out.

"Well, I'll do that, if necessary."

"Listen, Larry, dear," she said.

"You're not using your head. Wouldn't destroying that agreement you signed settle it all?"

"Burton, you blessed damsel," he cried, "you've got more sense in your little finger than I have in my whole body! Of course that's the answer! Regular old melodrama stuff. Why, here's even the papers!" He turned as if to put his new idea into immediate execution; but again she stopped him.

"Larry, you poor infant!" she cried. "It's time you hid somebody to look after you! What do you think you're going to do?"

"Get the agreement. Don't you worry about them not handing over when I tell them to!"

"Yes; but they can swear that it was taken from them by force."

"Well, what would you do then?"

"I'd steal it. Then what proof have they, except each other's words? You could deny that. Would you lie nicely in a good cause, do you think?"

"I don't think, it wouldn't be necessary. I think the burden of proof would be on them. How will we do it?"

"Dissemble," she cried. "Make them think that your opposition has blown over; that you're all ready to go ahead with father's scheme. Then father won't hang on to his bill fold too closely and—"

"How do you know it's in the bill fold?"

"I saw him put it there," she explained.

"Such a sudden about face on my part may not appeal to him."

"I've thought of that," she said. A slow color was mounting to her cheeks. "First of all it must become known who you are. He thinks you are a garage man, remember."

"I forgot that," laughed Davenport.

"All right; I drop the disguise and appear in my full royal regalia as the Celebrated Author. Do you imagine that will impress him?"

"Then"—she hesitated—"then we give him the plausible reason for your changing your mind."

"Which is?"

"The announcement of our engagement," she said in a voice so low that he barely heard it.

At this most unpropitious moment there came around the bend Simmons, Announces Candidacy!

lugging two infinitesimal trout.

"Damn!" muttered Davenport fervently.

But at Burton's suggestion Simmons was let into their secrets. "The paper belongs to me, and it is vitally necessary I get it back," Larry concluded.

"Will you help?"

"It will affect all our future happiness," put in Burton.

"It is only fair to say that if you are caught, it is probable I could help very little. If you succeed my wife and I"—Davenport glanced triumphantly toward Burton—"will take care of you."

"It's a sporting chance, sir," said Simmons stoutly. "You have treated me like a gentleman and ere moonrise the papers shall be in our power!"

"Now, Simmons, listen," Larry impressed the point. "There are two papers. One is on a single sheet of paper; the other is on several. I want the one on the single sheet. The other doesn't matter. But if you should be in any doubt whatever, bring them both. All set?"

And then Simmons was dismissed from the scene, and matters were taken up at the point of interruption. They would not interest us.
