Two Girls Ask Advice
Dear Miss Vera:
We are two girls of 15 who are very close friends. Do you think girls of 15 should be allowed to associate with boys? Do you think a girl should ever let a boy kiss her if they are well acquainted? Should a girl of 15 go for a ride with boys? Should girls tell boy friends of their secrets?
Would it be better for a girl to associate with a crowd or have her own personal boy friend? Should a girl be allowed to go to public dances at this age? Is it proper for a girl at this age to have as many boy friends as she wishes?

Dear Girls, I am going to try to answer all of your questions as well as I can. You are just at the age when questions of this sort crop up, and you need more than anything else the kindly interest and advice of parents and older persons. There is no reason why you should not associate with boys. There are, however, a great many reasons why you should not kiss or pet them—unless you are sure you are really in love with them and contemplate eventually marriage with them. Promiscuous love-making is harmful, both physically and mentally, besides being unrefined and creating a bad impression.

It is all right to go riding with a boy if he calls for you at your home, meets your parents and takes you out with their approval. If you know a boy well enough, there is no reason why you cannot confide in him if you think he is to be trusted.
At your age I think it best to have a great variety of friends, rather than one regular "boy friend". Unless, of course you find the one that you love. It would be best for you to keep away from public dances unless you go to them with the approval of your parents and in good company. There is no reason why you cannot have as many friends, both boys and girls, as you wish.

STONE AGE MUMMIES THE GREATEST MAGNET ROCKEFELLER SEES KINDNESS WAR DOES NOT PAY

Mammoths, extinct thousands of years, have been found preserved, skin, hair, flesh, in Northern ice. Hoping that men of the Stone Age might be similarly preserved, an expedition was sent to look.

On an island, far North in cold Alaska, scientists discovered at the top of an almost inaccessible cliff the grave of an ancient Stone Age chief.

His coffin was lined with well cured skins of the sea otter. His shirt was of bird skins, his clothing made of the finest furs. A favorite child, a seamstress to sew for him, a servant and hunter to get game for him, had been killed and buried with him to accompany him on his death journey.

This mummified family from the Stone Age will enlighten scientists. It interests us all, illustrating the unconquerable belief in a future life so deeply planted in the human brain.

Why was the belief put there if only to be disappointed?

The French Government builds a gigantic magnet several thousand times as powerful as any built thus far.

It will be used in scientific experiments in connection with the molecular and atomic constitution of matter, etc. The magnet eventually will be of great use in industry.

Here the steel companies use magnets picking up tons of steel rails and loading them on cars, dropping them down, lifting them up, as a boy lifts tacks with his toy magnet.

Man is an intelligent animal, living on a gigantic combination power wheel and magnet—the earth. He constructs his own little power plant, builds his own electric and magnetic power.

In the north day before yesterday man's electric work felt an electric storm, and an amazing aurora borealis stretching across the northern part of the continent.

If men could borrow and use the inexhaustible electric power of the earth, they need not turn coal or water falls into electric current.

John D. Rockefeller, beginning his ninetieth year, said: "I never regretted and am amazed at the kindness of people generally."

Eighty years ago, from his father's cottage doorway, in the Catskill foothills, he watched his uncle drive off, to trade horses—and saw him come back with better horses.

Now his ships go out to every harbor of the world, his scientists are fighting disease in every part of the earth. And looking at his right hand, now wrinkled, he knows it has made gifts to education and human progress totaling hundreds of millions.

A good deal in one life time.

Thomas W. Lamont, partner of J. P. Morgan, and an able citizen, tells business men they can be a distinct factor in preventing future wars.

They can and will be, for they have discovered that war, in the past often promoted by business, DOES NOT PAY.

Another big war would mean not merely sixty per cent income tax, but confiscation of principal, on a gigantic scale. Young men would not again consent to have their bodies sent to war, unless the rich man's dollars also went. Wise business men will oppose war and demand preparation for it.

The new model Buick will be exhibited at the F. W. Pettyjohn company salesroom on Saturday, it was announced today. Considerable interest has been expressed as to what changes will be made in this make of car.

The showing of the car Saturday celebrates the silver anniversary for the manufacturers. The first Buick was built in 1903, the first year's production totaling 37 autos.
