Be Courageous
 Dear Miss Vera:
 I am a truck driver, a gent at heart, but a rough-looking person. I love a girl of high-school age, but she thinks I'm too low-down for her. I go to night school and try to improve myself. Please help me. I must win her or I'll end it all.

DISCOURAGED.

Dear Discouraged, please do not give away to your grief. Your strength and health are priceless advantages. If the girl does not think you well enough educated for her, I am sure this condition will be remedied soon by your hard work at the night school. There are no heights to which you cannot climb. Most of the great men of the world began humbly. Think of the two men now running for president. Each one was a poor boy, and

REAL YANKEE CHICKEN PUFFS AT CIGARETTES

Winsted, Ct., August 2.—(AC)—A white foghorn pullet owned by Louis Cordano, of Danbury Quarter, has taken to smoking after the modern feminine fashion.

When a lighted cigarette is thrown to the ground, this pullet rushes over, picks it up in her beak and proudly begins smoking it, strutting through the barnyard.

The pullet smokes all brands. So far none of the companies have tried to get a testimonial from the pullet, but she has hope!
