Two Questions

Dear Miss Vera:
Here are questions that have been on my mind:

1. Which are the most emotional in love—blondes or brunettes?
2. I met a good looking fellow at the Fair, who asked to take me home. When I called for him at the stand he was tending, he had gone. I met him the next day and we made an appointment, but he didn't show up. I was angry, but thought perhaps he hadn't been able to find his way to the place where I live. I can't even remember his name or where he is from. But I'm hoping I'll see him sometime. If I meet him again, what shall I tell him?

K. K. V.

Dear K. K. V., nobody really knows which are the most emotional in love, blondes or the brunettes, but the general belief, encouraged by some scientific tests, is that brunettes are the most emotional.

I can hardly make heads or tails out of the story you tell of this young man at the Fair. Why worry so much about a casual acquaintance? Or perhaps there are things you have not told me. Did he and you come to any great degree of friendship after meeting?

I should think if he cared very much, he would have waited for you at his stand, and would have found his way to your home the other evening when you had an appointment, and if you meet him why not find out just what deterred him. But in the main I think you ought to forget the fellow—it seems suspiciously as if he is "stringing you along," unless there are things you haven't told me in your letter.

Fifteen and in Love

Dear Miss Vera:

I am fifteen and am very much in love with a boy eight years my senior. He is beginning to care for me lately. He goes out with a different girl who is four years older than himself. How can I make him love me?

CURLY HEAD.

Dear Curly Head, there is no way to "make" anyone love you—you have to take chances in the game of love, not force it into being. At the same time, I think you are probably too young to entertain such a feeling for a man of twenty-three. He probably thinks you are too young for him, too. It is possible that you may come to love each other—but if I were you I would wait patiently rather than try to force things.

'Very Latest'

By CECILE

GLADYS GLAD—one of Florenz Ziegfeld's most beautiful, in "Hoople"—shows us how to wear our new fall hats with the backward tilt that is Fashion's latest millinery whim. And we are immensely pleased with this little close-fitting model that molds itself so perfectly to her charming head.

With the hat a short jacket suit of brown beige checked velveteen is worn, and the underblouse of beige has the new high collar and side frill developed in a very soft, becoming way. The hat is a silky felt, of course, in the dark rose-brown shade that is so popular. We unhesitatingly recommend it as a splendid type for wear with the jacket suits of all.

Broader Brims Also Appear

Among the latest arrivals are also soft felts with slightly lower crowns and brims that, while they retain their short backs and fronts broaden perceptibly at the sides.

Shoes in Color

Deep rich shades of blue, green, red, and unusual shades of brown are seen among the newest shoes for fall, for Fashion decrees it's smart for shoes to match the costume.

Dance Caps in Gold and Silver

For dining, dancing of the theatre the very latest conceit is the snazzy little cap of metallic crochet woven to fit the head as tightly as a skull cap. Usually the braid pattern is swirled in great rosettes at each ear, while the balance of the cap is knitted in a straight mesh weave.

Now—The Hip-Line Fur Coat

It has been many seasons since we have enjoyed the chic of the short fur jacket—but today it is a Parisian theme of great importance. One hip-line model of mink, with a soft, rolling collar, is shown with a frock of pale brown crepe; another of gray goatskin, with Tuxedo front, is worn over a rough purple wool crepe in two tones.

EX-SPRINGFIELD FOLKS INJURED ON HIGHWAY

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Skinner, former Springfield folks who now reside in Longview, Washington, were grieved to hear the news that the couple was injured Sunday when the car in which they were driving left the pavement and overturned on the Pacific highway between Sheild and Tangent.

Mrs. Skinner suffered a compound fracture of the arm and cuts and bruises while Mr. Skinner suffered cuts and bruises. The couple lived in Springfield until about three years ago, when Mr. Skinner left his position with the Booth-Kelly lumber company to work in Longview.

Mrs. Skinner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sidwell of this city.
