EIGHT BIG FEATURES COMING TO McDONALD

New contracts, listing a group of eight pictures which the McDonald in Eugene will present as the "Sound Super-Eight," includes some of the best talking and sound pictures to be released this year, advises Manager Russell F. Brown.

Heading the list in the order in which these "Sound Super-Eights" have been booked for presentation at the McDonald, is "The Last Warning," the screen's first sound mystery drama, which opened in Eugene Wednesday for this week-end.

Following the mystery play, Sunday, January 13, will come that long anticipated air epic, "Wings," in which Clara Bow, Richard Arlen, Buddy Rogers and Gray Cooper are starred. "Wings" is said to surpass all previously shown air pictures, having been the fore runner of all such screen fare, since its initial roadshow presentation in New York, where it is now playing its second year at $2 admission. Complete sound effects and musical settings are features of the "Wings" presentation.

Third of the "Sound Super-Eight" is "Give and Take," a Universal talking picture of the famous Broadway farce hit by Aaron Hoffman, George Sidney and Jean Hersholt are starred.

"The Home Towners," a Vitaphone all-talking comedy drama that enjoyed a two weeks' run at the new Music Box Theatre in Portland, will be the next one. It is based on the George M. Cohan play that ran many seasons in New York.

Fifth on the McDonald's new list of specials will appear "The Patriot," which was previously announced but postponed due to a change in its national release date. Emil Jannings is its star.

"The Terror," a Vitaphone all-talking mystery farce, featuring an all-star cast of comedians including Louise Fazenda and Alex B. Francis, will be next to make its audible appearance at the McDonald.

The seventh and the final member of the "Sound Super-Eights" will comprise Eric Van Stroheim's "The Wedding March," said to be the most costly production ever made, and "On Trial," a Vitaphone all-talking drama with Pauline Frederick starred.

HIGH SCHOOL ORATORS WILL COMPETE IN STATE ORATORICAL CONTEST

The Springfield high school is already at work on the state-wide oratorical contest. Four students so far have entered the contest, Eugene Walker, Joseph Crandall, Leonard Franz, and Helen Mersdorf. Oscar Gladdish is coaching the students who are entering the contest.

The contest which is being sponsored by the Portland Oregonian and supported by the state bar association is one in which students of the state high schools will prepare and deliver orations upon the constitution of the United States. Already a large number of high schools have sent notices signifying their intentions to have entrants. The local school was among the first to enter.

The conditions governing the contest are first that any high school in the state may have entrants, that the subject must be on the constitution of the United States, that the entrants must be under 19 years of age on February 1, 1929 and they must be regular high school pupils. Both boys and girls are eligible.

The winner in the state contest will get a chance to compete in the national zone contest which may be held at Los Angeles. The victory of the Oregon speaker at Los Angeles means a three months trip to South America and participation in the national contest.

County and district chairmen of the Oregon bar association are already active in promoting the contest. E. O. Immel of Eugene is the Lane county chairman.
