Oregon showed a remarkable percentage gain in lumber shipments for 1928 over Washington and British Columbia, according to figures recently made public by the Pacific lumber inspection bureau. The total waterborne lumber shipments of the three districts for the year were 5,691,083, 714 feet and, in addition, 437,489,478 feet of logs and bolts also were certificated and moved.

Eugene has a milk war, the price being paid to producers by creameries being the issue. The Eugene Farmers' creamery is paying $2.69 per hundred for milk, which is the price producers are demanding from the other Eugene creameries and distributors, and which is the price denounced by other cream eries as prohibitive. The second factor is that the Eugene Farmers' creamery was the first to announce publicly a 1 cent cut in the retail price of milk bringing milk down to 11 cents a quart retail.

Organization of an irrigation district which will include approximately 900 acres on Cow creek, adjoining the town of Riddle, has been started by the 28 farmers residing within the proposed boundaries. The project provides for the pumping of 12 secondfeet of water from Cow creek, giving ample water to irrigate the entire district, much of which is already in prunes. The pipe line would be 21/2 miles in length. In addition to orchards, the farmers plan to grow alfalfa and clover on the irrigated land.
