O.S.C. Co-ed Debaters Argue That Science Is Aid to Faith in God

Mamie Erickson, Bend, (above) and Opal Smith Monmouth, Oregon State college debaters

The moot question of science and religion which has enlivened discussions in all manner of groups from the "hot stove council" to state legislatures and high courts, has now come in for consideration by college co-ed debaters.

Arguing the negative of the question, "Resolved, that modern science tends to destroy theistic faith," two members of the Oregon State college co-ed debate squad have just invaded California and met teams there from the College of the Pacific at Stockton, University of California at Berkeley and Mills college at Oakland.

Mamie Erickson of Bend, and Opal Smith of Monmouth are the two Oregon girls who maintain that science and faith in God are not in conflict but actually helpful one to the other. Science without faith they say, obviously would become a curse, but science dominated by the spirit of religion is the key to progress and the hope of the future.

The Oregon team quoted Michael Pupin, the noted physicist as saying, "My beliefs as a scientist do not contradict a single element of the religious beliefs which my mother and the people of her native village held when I was a boy. Science has simply brought me to a higher, broader view of the Creator."

Wherever science has explored the universe, the Oregon girls said, it has found unchangeable order and law. This, they said, leaves no escape from the conclusion that back of everything there is a definite guiding principle. Either this law and order is the result of hazardous happenings or it is the result of divine intelligence. The most distinguished scientists themselves accept the latter as far more reasonable.

reached for the "chute" while the plane careened and tumbled madly. A few hundred feet from the water, the pilot got his parachute in hand and straightened the plane out. Knechtel got his breath and they ascended in search of the mere combat planes. They found them—still searching for a background of light, fluffy clouds. Knechtel had lived a lifetime in four minutes.

Lumber Dry Kiln Built at O. S. C.

Extensive Seasoning Tests to Be Made on Oregon Woods By Forestry School

Oregon State College, Corvallis, April 11—An experimental dry kiln to be used by the school of forestry in working out practical drying schedules for northwest lumber has been completed on the campus and is now undergoing preliminary tests. The kiln is constructed similar to those used commercially except that it is equipped with elaborate automatic instruments for checking temperature, humidity and the weight of the kiln load from the time it is put in until the seasoning process is completed.

This kiln is the only one of commercial size operated by any forestry school in the country, so far as known. Its installation here is expected to prove of tremendous benefit to the lumbering interests of the state, at whose request it was authorized by the board of regents.

Much of the lumber manufactured in Oregon must now and will always have to be shipped long distances to market. At present the higher grades only are kiln dried before shipping. If practical methods of seasoning the common grades are worked out freight rates to the middle west and east, which now range from $14 a thousand feet up, may be materially cut by removal before hand of the excess weight of water.

Every wood and even every dimension of the same wood, requires a special schedule for most effective seasoning, according to forestry investigations. Much timber now wasted in logging operations may also be conserved if proper methods of seasoning the different woods are perfected.

"ENDUEMENT" THEME OF BAPTIST SERMON

The church Bible school will meet at 10 o'clock.

The B. Y. P. U. will meet at the church at 6:30, and the evening services will begin at 7:30. "Penless Philanthropists" will be the theme of the evening sermon. Mrs. Pengra will sing again, and the Baptist male quartet will also sing. The jewel verse for Sunday evening is 1 Peter, 1: 18, 19.

"Conquest" Depicts Dangers of Flyers In Antarctic

Amazing Adventures of Scott, Shackleton, Byrd and Others Recreated in Great Melodrama; Monte Blue and Lois Wilson in Leading Roles.

Anticipating the tremendous interest which is focused upon polar exploration flights, Warner Bros. have produced a lavish talking picture special with the aerial conquest of the Antarctic as its central theme.

"Conquest" is the title of the production which opens today, for the week-end at the McDonald in Eugene, with Monte Blue in the starring role; H. B. Warner featured, Lois Wilson in the leading feminine part and Edmund Breese and Tully Marshall prominently cast. Roy Del Ruth directed the 100% Vitaphone special in which dialogue, natural sounds and symphonic accompaniment are incorporated throughout.

Two flights similar to that delineated in "Conquest" are at present under way, one under Commander Byrd and a second under the command of Captain Wilkins.

"Conquest" actually details two attempts to master the baffling Antarctic, its plot exposing the perils of the sub-zero zone, and its effect upon the mental fibre of the daring adventurers who seek to conquer it. Blue has a heroic role as the pilot of the "Conquest" attempts and Warner as his navigator.
