BOOST FOR THE NEW CREAMERY

The new Springfield Creamery is ready for business and should receive the whole-hearted patronage of this community. It has a plant that in many respects is the most modern in this part of Oregon and one that any city might well be proud of. State inspectors and creamery experts have all pronounced the plant excellent. The operators have had long experience in the business and a reputation for turning out the highest grade products.

"What Springfield Makes, Makes Springfield." This slogan is as true here as anywhere else. Our patronage of the new creamery will help the community and establish a market for the farmers' cream that is now being sent out of the community. When we spend a dollar at home we can be certain to get most of it back in one way or another. When we spend money for butter or substitute made in some distant city only the small profit the dealer makes stays in the community.

WILL IT HELP THE FARMERS?

The United States Senate has at last agreed upon a tariff bill. It has yet to be accepted by the House of Representatives, and there may be a long battle in the conference committee of the two houses. But the outlook is that the tariff question will be settled, for a few years to come, with a few weeks.

That in itself is good news. There is no question that the delay in fixing tariff rates has held many manufacturers back from proceeding to "business as usual." So long as nobody knew how far any particular industry might be exposed to foreign competition, capital has naturally been timid about investing in it.

The evident purpose of the Senate in raising rates generally to the highest levels in history is to keep the American market for American industry and agriculture. How far it will succeed in doing this is another question, which only time can answer. And how far it will prove a boon to the farmer to have foreign competition eliminated is a question which all the argument in the world will not answer.

The large farmers growing staple crops probably will get better prices for their products, on the average. Whether those increased receipts will be eaten up by higher prices they must pay for what they buy with their incomes remains to be seen. That it will make very much difference one way or another to the general run of small farmers is much to be doubted.

A calf ran a stage in the "dash at Cottage Grove, according to the Cottage Grove Sentinel. Now we know why they write poetry about the legs of the editor of that paper.

It used to be what went on behind the footlights that concerned the country. Now it is what goes on behind the headlights.

Morality is not a question to be settled by the statutes.

WHERE THE MONEY GOES

When we spend a dollar at home for a product made at home the community still has the product and the money. When we spend a dollar for something made in a distant land we have the product but not the money. Oregon made goods should be more largely consumed in Oregon, because that is only the way this state can come near holding a balanced trade.

Installment buying is said to be taking all the people's money. Think of all the things that are sold on the installment plan and think, too, how few of them are made in Oregon.

THE FIDDLERS

It was at a concert in New York where a celebrated teacher of the violin was exhibiting his pupils. A boy of eighteen stepped on the stage and began to play. A hush fell over the room. His face, his fingers, every move and look proclaimed an embryo artist.

With easy assurance, in which was no trace of effort, he played one number after another, the audience urging him on with enthusiastic applause. Each of us felt the thrill of personally discovering this new star in the musical heavens. The concert over, a gentleman rushed forward to congratulate the teacher.

"You must be wonderfully proud of that brilliant boy!" he exclaimed.

The teacher was unresponsive. "Not very proud," he said.

"But surely he will be a master."

"No. He will probably be a fiddler in a cafe."

The man was a bit indignant. Was this coolness born of professional jealousy—the envy of an older man for the brilliant youth? The teacher did not leave him long in doubt.

"The boy could be a master, but he never will. Some of the others who performed less well today will hear from later. But he—no. He will be a fiddler. It comes too easy; he will not work."

If you have read much of biography you know that the teacher was right. Nothing is more impressive than the infinite pains which great men have taken, not merely to achieve position, but to keep it.

Emerson tells of a letter from an artist friend describing Michaelangelo's huge mural painting of the Last Judgment, which the friend "had the opportunity of seeing very near, and was astonished at the minute finish of muscles and nerves, finished like a miniature." No detail was too small for the artist whose shoulders were bent by the long effort of finishing his immortal pictures under the dome of St. Peter's.

Booth, the great actor, was never satisfied. One night, after a performance in which he seemed to the audience to have surpassed himself, a friend went to congratulate him.

He "found Booth with his head in his hands in the deepest dejection, from which not even the praise of an old friend could arouse him, disgusted at having given so miserable performance."

Whether great success is worth what it costs or whether mediocrity is a happier state are debatable questions. But there is no secret about the formula. Eternal work is the difference between the artist—and the fiddler.

IMPROVEMENTS PLANNED FOR CABINET SHOP HERE

Many new improvements are planned for the Springfield cabinet shop on North Fourth street within the next few days, according to H. B. Pitts, proprietor. The front of the building will be rebuilt and more doors and windows put in to brighten up the interior. A new floor and considerable changing is planned for the inside of the building, which will include a modern display room for doors and window sash.

The present cabinet shop is among the oldest business institutions in the city, and was acquired by Mr. Pitts about ten years ago.
