GUNMAN'S BLUFF

that at least was genuine, for she knew her brother's writing.

She was viewing a new world, or viewing it from a new angle; and somehow she was able to cope with problems which the day before would have terrified her. Of that new gift she was unconscious—she could only feel the effect.

During the hours which Luke Maddison had spent in his prison house, it was curious that he should think so little on serious topics. He was face to face with death in its most hideous aspect—it was impossible to mistake Connor's intention—and yet for the main part his mind was occupied by the veriest trivialities. If he thought of Margaret at all it was only in a detached and impersonal way and to find an explanation for her presence with the police at his flat that night. She must have the key; the police went to her—but why?

Two blocks of rock salt were put on the floor under Luke's legs, and with a knife one of the men scooped a deep depression in two of the corners. The other blocks were laid on top. Connor lifted the heavy chain, wound it carefully around and around the salt, fastening the last two links with a piece of wire.

They discussed their grisly work without emotion.
"You want to be careful it doesn't slip over his feet, Harry. Tighten that chain a bit—not too tight or you'll break the salt."
"Get that old plank to lay him on," and the bigger of the two men walked to the door and pulled it open.

Connor saw him start back and his face wrinkle.
"Who's that?" he asked sharply.
The man in the passage walked into the room at his leisure. Connor saw him and showed his teeth like an angry dog.

"Hullo, Gunner! What the hell are you doing around here?"
Gunner Haynes looked from Connor to the unconscious man on the floor.
"Ingenious but not original," he drawled, his thin lips curling in contempt. "You're dropping him in the river, of course, and the water will dissolve the salt, the chains will fall off, and the verdict will be Death from Misadventure. What a pity."

"What's the pity, Gunner?" asked Connor.
"That I happened to butt in," said Haynes. "Who's the victim?"
"There's no victim," said Connor loudly. "This poor fellow is ill and we're taking him to the hospital."

The Gunner nodded.
"I thought you might be picking him," he said. "No marks of violence on the body, nothing to show that he didn't drown, as people drown, by accident. I'm sorry to spoil your amusement, but you'll have to let him go."
"Why," asked Connor.
"Because," said the Gunner deliberately.

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an execution and order of sale issued out of the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for Lane County, May 9th, 1930, upon and pursuant to a decree made by said Court May 8th, 1930, in a suit pending therein in which Rant E. Dunsmoor was plaintiff and L. D. Collier and others were defendants, which execution and order of sale was to me directed and commanded me to sell the real property hereinafter described to satisfy certain liens and charges in said decree specified, I will on Saturday, the 14th day of June, 1930, at the hour of one o'clock p. m., at the southwest door of the County Court-house in Eugene, Lane County, Oregon, offer for sale and sell at public auction for cash, subject to redemption as provided by law, all of the right, title, and interest of the defendants in said suit and of all parties claiming by, through or under them or any of them since the 8th day of May, 1930, in or to the following described real property, to-wit:

The east half of lot six (6) and all of lot five (5) in block seven in Westmoreland, an addition to Eugene, Lane County, Oregon, as the same is platted and recorded in the office of the County Clerk of Lane County, Oregon.
Dated this 12th day of May, 1930.
H. L. BOWN,
Sheriff of Lane County, Oregon.

ately, "I'm in it! You don't catch me an accessory before, after, or in the fact of murder. It's not my graft, Connor. Remove that interesting apparatus."

Connor smiled. His hand dropped quite naturally out of sight below the level of the table.

"If you pull a gun on me," said the Gunner, not a muscle of his lean body moving. "I shall shoot you through the stomach. It'll take you five days to die, and it's a very painful death by all accounts. I shall then go out and explain to the police why I shot you, and there'll be no flowers from Scotland Yard."

One of Connor's assistants moved a step toward him.

"Look here, Gunner—" he began, mildly enough.
Haynes' fist shot out so swiftly that the man could not counter the blow. He went down with a crash. The Gunner stood motionless, watching.

"Both hands in sight, Connor. Lay them on the table."
He had no weapon in his hand, but none knew better than the livid man on the other side of the table how quickly the Gunner could draw, with what devilish accuracy he could shoot.

"What's the fuss? This bird does not mean a thing to you."
"Unlace him," smiled the Gunner.
"I'm sorry to butt in, as I said before."

"What did you come here for, anyway?" asked Connor savagely.
The Gunner looked up at the ceiling.

"I forgot exactly," he said untruthfully. And then: "Who is this man?"
"Man named Smith. He squealed on me tonight, and then tried to carry it off with a tale about being a banker—he's got a nerve. Luke something or other."

Gunner Haynes bent down and peered into Luke's face.

He recognized the sleeping man instantly.

"Luke something or other, eh? Where did you pick him up?" As he spoke he beckoned one of the men.

"Take that chain off."
The man glanced uneasily at his chief, but Connor nodded.

"The trouble with you, Gunner, is that you interfere with other people's graft. If you want to know who he is, he did that job today in Bond street."

He related Smith's biography; Gunner Haynes knew that he was speaking the truth. He was puzzled, but not greatly. He had lived too long on the seamy side of life to be surprised at anything. Men had lived double lives before, but this was the kind of double life which Haynes thought belonged to the realm of imaginative novelists. A banker who amused himself in smash and grab raids was wildly fictional—but possible.

There might be, he thought, a woman in the background. Where women touched life, the inexplicable became almost daylight clear.
"What are you going to do with him?" asked Connor, as the man stooped and with scarcely an effort lifted the unconscious Luke onto a chair.

The Gunner did not answer the question. Instead, he pronounced one of his own.
"Have you any slush in this place?" he asked and saw a look of alarm come into the face of the other.

"Slush?" said Connor quickly. "No—why should we? I don't deal in that kind of stuff."

"No forged French banknotes?" The Gunner shook his head in anticipation of the answer.

"What do you mean?"
A smile lit up the saturnine face.

"You asked me why I came here, and I'm telling you. They're raiding your place tonight. I only got to know about it an hour ago. I thought I'd come along and tell you. I don't know why, but that's my nature—helping poor crooks!"

He saw the three men glance at one another, and the alarm in Connor's face was patent.

"We had a parcel over from Paris the other day," he said uneasily.
"Harry, get it up."

He looked at the huddled figure of Luke.

"You're making a big mistake about this bird," he said. "You let him get into the hands of the police, and he'll put up a squeal that'll make you deaf!"

Stooping, the Gunner put his arm about Luke Maddison and lifted him bodily. He turned and strode through the door, down the narrow passage, and into the untidy yard. He had already located Connor's van, and he was on the point of hoisting his burden into the interior when he heard a stealthy scraping against wood. It was the sound that a man makes when he is climbing—somebody was getting over the gate.

He sat Luke on the ground, propped him against a wall, and went noiselessly toward the entrance of the yard. Stooping to get a skylight, he saw the head and shoulders of two men above the gate. It was enough; he need see no more.
