Gary Cooper and June Collyer in a scene from the Paramount Production, "A Man From Wyoming," Friday and Saturday at the Fox McDonald.

"SOUTH SEA ROSE" AT COLONIAL THEATRE

In a role not unlike her unforgettable stage creation in "Kiki," Lenore Ulrich, as a tempestuous and fiery half-caste, comes to the Colonial theatre screen Friday and Saturday in "South Sea Rose," her second Fox Movietone all talking picture.

Here, with a story conceived around her sparkling talent, Miss Ulrich brings to the speaking screen a performance destined to match the brilliant creations of her famous stage career.

Tantalizing, devil-possessed and reckless, Miss Ulrich portrays Rosalie, the deserted daughter of a seafaring explorer held to the dull routine of a South Sea island convent. Here, burning with the passion of maidenhood, she frees herself to marry the first man who expresses a desire for possession.

Freed from the restrictions of the convent walls, Rosalie accompanies her sea-captain husband to his home on the peaceful shores of the New England coast. To the bigoted people of the community, tropical islanders are but a little beyond savages, and the reception is repellent. But Rosalie, exercising the magic of her innocent purity, is creating her own amusement.

Tricky, deceptive and dangerous, her antics cause hatred and jealousy among the plain folks and her innocent treachery gives reason for a maddening but exquisitely related episode in the lives of this small band of wayfarers.

Charles Bickford as the rough and ready sea captain, gives a capital performance, and a long list of competent players contribute fine supporting work. Among them are Kenneth MacKenna, Tom Patricola, Elizabeth Patterson, Farrell Macdonald, Roscoe Ates, George MacFarlane, Ilka Chase, Daphne Pollard, Ben Hall and Charlotte Walker.

Has Chicken Pox

STATE FAIR LARGEST IN OREGON HISTORY SEVEN DAYS, SEPT. 22-28

SALEM, Ore., Aug. 31.—(Special)—Preparations for Oregon's 69th annual state fair this year are declared to include every possible feature to insure the largest and most complete exposition in the history of the event.

Premiums and purses aggregating $80,000, horse race prizes totaling an additional $17,500, and a seven-day event instead of the usual six days are among the many attractions of the program to guarantee the success of the state wide project to be held September 22 to 28. With the fair being held over through Sunday, a plan but once before attempted, total attendance is expected to far eclipse any previous showing, while the additional day also will thwart unseasonable weather in hampering the exposition.

Application for entries to the horse show have been exceptionally large, and the record purse offered this year is expected to attract the finest stables of the east and midwest. Entries into the stake races closed July 1, while class race entries will be received until August 15.

Early applicants for entrants to the livestock exhibition indicate this branch will be larger than at any previous exposition, according to Mrs. Ella S. Wilson, secretary of the state fair board. Exceptional interest is being shown in all classes of stock showing. It is declared.

Expositions throughout the United States this year are watching the Oregon event keenly to observe the results of the first disease-free showing of cattle ever attempted. A new rule adopted by the 1930 fair board provides that all dairy cattle over one year old must be provided with health permits issued by an approved veterinarian, testifying that the animals have been duly examined and are free from infectious abortion.

Members of a herd certified to be free from the disease and to which has been issued an abortion-free herd certificate will be accepted as exceptions to the rule. Untested animals will be subject to an examination on the fair grounds.

Work is progressing rapidly in preparing the grounds for the huge crowds, and every effort is being made to have everything in readiness in ample time to care for early arrivals.
