NO SOLUTION YET

Both the wets and the dries find some satisfaction in the Wickersham report. The dries point with pride that the report calls for carrying on the noble experiment further. The wets say that modification is inevitable and the report acknowledges it.

The average man, we believe, thinks that some sort of change should be made in the interest of better law observance. He thinks something should be done to discourage drinking by the upper classes and to eliminate the bootlegger. On how this might be accomplished the report is silent, evidently the experts have no more solution to the problem than you or I.

The Oregonian suggests that the University of Oregon research department make the power survey that is troubling Portland, and for which $25,000 has been voted by the city council. This would place the facts and finding about political suspicion and be a deciding authority, the newspaper believes. With this we can not fully agree, selfishness on both sides of this argumentative question would result in such a survey satisfying neither and both would then seek to discredit the university.

Frank Lonergan, speaker of the house, offered Governor Meier the opportunity to appoint his own power committee and the governor refused as he said he did not want to encroach on the legislative prerogatives. When Mr. Lonergan makes the appointments he shall not now be open to criticism even if his committee gets no where.

A court in Hungary ordered the father of a young man who married a rich girl to pay his debts, to refund the money to the girl's father. If that were the universal practise on the European side of the ocean so much of our money would not be going abroad in the hands of titled persons who have married rich American girls.

Butter and eggs, two of man's best known foods, are at very low price levels. It is neither necessary to eat oleomargarine or Chinese eggs even in hard times. The American farmer is here to serve us with quality products. He deserves our support while we owe nothing to the substitute makers whose products are practically worthless from a food standpoint.

Estimates are that 800 new bills will be introduced in the legislature of which more than half will become laws. We'll buy any legislator a new hat that can name 100 of them without stopping.

There are 28 farmers and 25 lawyers in the legislature this session. There is only one editor and he has since sold his newspaper; no doubt he looked for a long, hard session.

More than 10,000 meals and 3300 beds were given by the Salvation Army in Portland during the past three months. This organization is carrying on a wonderful work for those in distress.

One more contract and the McKenzie highway will all be state road. Let's have the Vidan-Nimrod section let at an early date.

Our guess is that Clara Bow will sign her own checks from now on.

WHO WAS THE LOSER? (Junction City Times)

A man picked up a one dollar bill on the street and gave it to his wife to pay the milk man. The milk man paid the feed man. The feed man paid the butcher. The butcher paid the grocer and the grocer paid it to the man who found it and the man discovered that it was a counterfeit bill.

It is plain to be seen that this bill while it was paying five one dollar debts was just as good as though it had been genuine, yet nobody lost in the transaction. Money is nothing but a medium of exchange. It represents values in commodities. It has no intrinsic value. A twenty-dollar gold piece has no intrinsic value as long as it is a twenty-dollar gold piece. Whenever you make use of the gold it ceases to be a twenty-dollar gold piece.

Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

"QUOTA MAD"

A famous advertising agent was talking with me about business in these United States.

It is his function to prepare the advertising for several large manufacturers, and to consult with them on their sales problems. He goes home every night all tired out. He says he doesn't know anybody in business who is getting any real fun out of it.

"I'll give you my program for a typical day," he said. "I come down to my office a little before nine, and there is the sales manager of a shoe company waiting for me. His pockets are full of charts. His company's sales are 20 per cent ahead of last year, but is he satisfied? Not for a minute. He must set the mark for next year 50 per cent ahead.

"Then I go over to the office of a food manufacturer. He has just closed up the best year of his history. And we try to figure out how he can do twice as much again!

"I lunch with the officers of a cement company. If they would get together with the competitors, and agree to curtail production just a little, they could all make more money. The price of their product might have to be raised a trifle, but I doubt it, because the sales expense would be that much less. But will they curtail? Never. Every year must show bigger figures. The quotas must go up and up.

"The trouble with this country is that we are gone crazy on the subject of volume. We are quota mad."

As he talked I recalled a conversation I had some years ago with an American who represents a French manufacturer in this country.

"I have a heart-breaking time with that Frenchman," he said. "Every year I go over there and plead with him to double his factory. We could sell twice as much stuff if he would only turn it out. And do you know what he says? He just waves his hands in French fashion and sputters: 'Why should I double my plant and work twice as hard? I and my family are making money enough. We have a good time. We enjoy our lives. Why should we work ourselves to death?'"

That seems to us Americans a very terrible utterance. It is treason to the spirit of modern business. Of course, a man should force his production, and his sales, and force his own poor mind and body until he dies at the age of sixty with and order blank in his hand.

Somewhere between the French attitude and our attitude there must be a half-way point that would combine the best elements of both.

"Life," says the Bible, "is more than bread, and the spirit than raiment." It also asks the question, "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world and lose his own life?"

Or, in modern language, what's the use of killing yourself by being quota mad?

A WOMAN'S WORKING TIME...

The eight hour day and the 5 1/2 day week is quite generally established in business. This makes a 44 hour week.

In the home, however, recent surveys show that the farm woman work 61 1/2 hours a week. The city dweller is not exactly an idler, either. Her working time is 49 1/2 hours a week. Almost endless hours of cooking, dishwashing, cleaning, mending, sewing, washing and ironing. The rest of the time they have to themselves, unless one of the children is ill, or something else develops to upset the customary schedule.

Electricity has contributed in no small measure to reducing the working hours of BUSINESS.

It can reduce the working hours in the home as well. Electrical appliances not only cut down the working hours but make the week more pleasant by relieving you of the heaviest and least pleasant part of the work.

Cut down your working time! You can use it to much better advantage in other ways!
