New York Taxicabs

New York's 30,000 or so taxicabs are to be seen scurrying around at all hours of the day and night and they are singularly cheap to ride in. That is, provided one does during the rush hours when the many delays will make riding in them one of the most expensive of all trips. The meter works just as fast when the cab is standing still as when it is under way,, as in all

The rate averages twenty cents a mile after the first quarter of a mile, which is fifteent cents, and visitors wonder how autos of the highest price makes can be used for such a cheap service. The cars are specially made to stand up to the wear and tear of the city streets and the frequent use of brakes.

All New York taxies must be built to carry not fewer than five passengers, which is the reason why there are no Ford taxies used here. Efforts to introduce Fords have met with failure, as a car to conform to the law requires a longer wheel base than that of the low priced car. Many Tammany officials own stock in some of the big taxi companies, and have opposed any change in the law, the results being that the streets are cluttered up with long taxicabs when smaller cars would do quite as

The verage taxicab driver earns about $35 a week and has to know a lot about the city to hold his job.

Cats

Whether the rats used to be so plentiful here that cats were needed as an offset, or whatever the reason, there are probably more cats to the square mile in New York than in any other city of the country. All hours of the day one can see them strolling about even in the busiest of streets and they are not bothered to any extent. In fact, New Yorkers are noticeable for their love for animals and small children, the latter particularly.

One of the most curious sights of the city to one who happens to stay out very late at night is the number of cats to be seen prowling about, ransacking garbage cans and often, indulging in voice culture. although most of the songs are given in backyards. Sleeping in a back room in a New York house, in a majority of cases, has to be done to the nocturnal wailing of tabbies. It is one of the least pleasant aspects of the city.

Some Tall Insurance

People along the "main stem" are pret most all sorts of big deals, but one business transaction recently gave even city people a thrill. It was the placing of an insurance policy for $55,000,000 for three years on two associate risks. The annual premium was figured at $91,300, and the risk was distributed among many companies, no single one caring to carry all those eggs in one bas-

The property insured was that of the new Hudson River bridge and the Holland tunnel, which runs under the same river and carries millions of passengers every year. As both structures are as near fireproof as human hands can make them the policy cannot be called fire insurance.

Instead, the policy guarantees against loss from any "Act of God," the country's enemies depredators and other individuals. It is about as complete coverage as can be had for such structures. The Port of New York Authority, the interstate board which built and operates the two enterprises, is forced to carry such insurance in order to protect the bondholders who lent the money to build them.

Use for Abandoned Farms

A new use for abandoned farm may be indicated by the way many New York people, able to leave the city over the week-end or perhaps squeeze a whole month or more of vacation, are buying up deserted

Of course the men with money buy only the choicest farms, if they are located in the right country. The professional man, with only a comparatively small amount of money, is just as well satisfied to take over a farm that has been worked to death, buy a few goats. perhaps, and turn them loose on it and then move into the old farm-

Some of these farms, with houses dating back a hundred or more years, can be acquired, it is said. for as low as $500, provided one is willing to go far away enough from the New York City Hall.

Even abandoned farms will grow fine shade trees and velvet lawns while, with the proper use of fertilizer, kitchen gardens can be in stalled on almost any piece of ground unless it is composed of solid granite.

Husband: From the glimpse had of her this morning. I rather like our new cook. There seems t be plenty of go about her. Wife: Yes, she's gone.
