Mr. Cox has served on the council two terms. He was chairman of the finance committee at the time of his resignation. Local Tax Reduction Held Impossible Now

Reduction Would Increase Financial Stress Instead of Improving Conditions

OPPOSE INDIANA PLAN

County-Wide Gathering Considers Tax Reduction; Reports Are Given

Lane county taxpayers want their taxes reduced but they are unwilling to reduce the standards of living of employees and to deprive themselves of the (so-called) luxuries of government. They would rather continue paying the present taxes or would even be willing to pay slightly higher taxes if necessary it was decided at an unofficial meeting of taxing bodies and taxpayers at the Eugene chamber of commerce Wednesday evening.

Those attending the meeting also expressed themselves as being unflinchingly opposed to any attempt to remove the control of taxation and tax levies from the hands of the taxpayers as is proposed in the Indiana plan, whereby the power of determining tax levies for each tax group in the district is left in the hands of a hand-picked county committee, working under a state commission.

Oppose Special Session

Suggestions that a special session of the legislature be called to enact new tax legislation were vigorously opposed. The unofficial group going on record as being unopposed to such gathering at this time.

Opening the meeting presided over by E. A. McCormack, president of the Lane county chamber of commerce, Judge C. P. Barnard outlined the tax situation as it is being handled by county officials, going into detail in an explanation of the tax funds being spent for road construction. There can be no appreciable county tax reduction under the present conditions he declared. A saving of only $8,000 would result to the county if each salaried employee received a 10 percent cut in wages, and this would not begin to provide for the 20 percent reduction asked by Governor Meier who asked that the meeting be called, he added.

State road construction is well under way and must be completed. Expensive right of ways must be purchased for the state roads, he pointed out stating that the only possibility of reducing county taxation would be to stop work on county market roads. This, he explained would throw between 100 and 200 men out of work and would not improve conditions.

Cities Cannot Cut

Officials from various smaller cities of the county as well as school districts explained what they have been doing to reduce taxes and declared that they began such a program more than a year ago. Any further cuts now would work an undue hardship on the people themselves who are supposed to be the beneficiaries of tax supported activities.

Approximately 300 people attended the meeting. Representatives were there from every part of the county from Oakridge to Florence and from Junction City to Cottage Grove.

W. C. Allen of Vida, representative of the Farmer's Grange, on the county chamber of commerce, explained the farmer's tax plight. He stressed the necessity of finding suitable means of levying heavier taxes on the wealthier people of the state who are not now paying their share of the expenses. He warned the meeting, however, that any drastic attempt at tax reduction at this time would likely result in the creation of even more straightened financial circumstances for many of those who depend on tax funds for their income. He expressed the attitude that they might stop road work, but that they would have to care for more needy people with other tax levies. He stressed the need for providing as much employment as possible.

Luxuries Voted By People

Edward F. Bailey, Eugene, and E. E. Mendenhall, Cottage Grove went into a discussion of the merits of a tax commission plan for determining district levies. The people have piled their officials with increasing luxuries of government and have willingly voted the taxes to pay for them. Now the only way to reduce them is to reduce the demands put on the government, and this the public will not do, stated Bailey.

Plan for Large Interests

"The Indiana tax plan always seemed to be a child of the large non-resident property owners in that state. They find it much easier to control a hand-picked commission which sets the tax levies, than to try and influence the voters in each district to set them to suit their desires," he continued.

"The Oregon legislature provided a tax equalization commission in 1929 which ought to be able to do the work of the proposed state commission," Bailey said.

Mendenhall, a former resident of Indiana stated that under the Indiana plan any 10 persons could object to a levy made by the county commission and thereby hold up the levy until the state deputies could investigate the dispute. Oregon has in the neighborhood of 2700 taxing units, he stated, and this would give just that many opportunities for dissension and would require the employment of many more people to handle this adjustment work.

Individual cities reported that they have pared their budgets to the very bottom. Some of them indicated that they might be forced to raise their levies this year to provide funds with which to meet the interest and payments on delinquent Bancroft Improvement bonds on much of the property where the owners have refused to make the payments and have forced the city to take over the property.

H. C. Wheeler, veteran legislator from Lane county and member of the first tax group to meet at Salem to consider the possibility of reduction, hoped that there would be no special session. He stated that no tax program could be enacted in four or five days and that he would not obligate himself to consider only tax problems at the session were it called and other matters arose.

Wheeler made the only defense of the governor's plan, stating that no serious attempt would be made to cut taxes without the consent of the people. He stated that the governor had been responsible for much rigid economy at Salem because his threat to clean house had caused many officials to check their own affairs and make reductions before the governor's investigators began on their department or office.

It was generally agreed that two-thirds of all present tax money was spent for incurred obligations and that these would have to be gradually eliminated before any tax relief could be expected.

They urge the people to drive their cars to the depot and leave them in an especially chosen parking place. They will employ people to watch the automobiles during the day to prevent thefts.

SCHOOL ACTIVITY SHOWN BY BOARD

Elect Miss Leone Elliott as Teacher of Domestic Arts and Music

WILL REPAIR BUILDINGS

Walthville People Discussing Bus Transportation for High School Students

Miss Leone Elliott of Perrydale, Oregon will be the new domestic arts instructor at the Springfield high school. Miss Elliott was elected to that position at a special meeting of the school board held here Saturday afternoon.

She is a graduate of Oregon State college, having completed her work there the past June. She has also studied music and will have charge of the glee club at the local school in addition to her duties as teacher of sewing and cooking. She fills the vacancy left by the resignation recently of Mrs. Georgiana Peterson.

Walthville Talks Bus

Attendance at the Springfield high school will be increased by approximately 30 students from the Walthville high school district. A number of residents of that district met with the school board here Tuesday evening to discuss plans for the absorption of these pupils and the transportation of them to and from their homes. Residents of the Walthville school district were to hold a meeting tonight to discuss the transportation problems.

It had been suggested that the parents each assume the responsibility for transporting their children to and from high school, but officials of the districts point out that the voters at the last election decided to retain the Walthville district, merely trying out the proposed plan of sending high school students to Springfield rather than face the necessity of building a new school to replace the present one which has been condemned.

By retaining the district it is possible to levy a high school tax to provide transportation expenses, thus making a high school education possible for every child in the district.

It has also been found that far more satisfactory results can be obtained by sending students to a distant school on a bus supervised by a competent person, and which leaves both ends of the run on regular schedule, than to have students drive cars of their own and leave whenever they desire to do so.

To Improve Buildings

Some minor repair work and improvements in the Springfield school buildings were authorized by the board after their inspection of the school property. These improvements will include the construction of a cement walk leading from the sidewalk into the Brattain school at the front of the building. This will replace the old wooden one which has been used since the building was built.

Other improvements will include the cleaning of several rooms at the Lincoln school and the kalsomining of about four of them.
