

UNEMPLOYMENT IN LANE DISCUSSED

Immediate Need Seen for Action in Order to Prevent Much Suffering Later

ROAD JOBS ARE TALKED

Governor's Committee Will Meet to Formulate Plans for Coming Winter

To discuss preliminary plans for a program of unemployment relief for Lane county for the coming winter, the special committee named recently by Governor Meier composed of Judge C. P. Barnard of the county court, Carl G. Washburne and H. L. Edmunds have been appointed.

Governor Meier in a letter to Judge Barnard says that he does not desire to appear as "an alarmist" but that there are now at least 25,000 unemployed in Oregon outside of Multnomah county and that there is likely to be much suffering during the coming winter due to the depression.

The governor suggests that the committee in Lane work through the service clubs, women's organizations and schools.

Immediate steps to formulate a program to aid the jobless are essential now if much suffering is to be avoided, Governor Meier says.

The governor further suggests that a system of registration of men and women in need of work be arranged and that the county clerk be appointed secretary for the committee to register those seeking jobs.

Judge Barnard says that he will not be necessary in Lane as the Red Cross office at the courthouse will handle the registration. Most of the work to be provided in Lane through the governor's committee will be in the road construction program. Federal and state funds will be available for this although the county will have but little money to contribute, Judge Barnard said.

LABOR DAY HOLIDAYS DOLLAR DAYS ON R. R.

With cent-a-mile transportation fares on Southern Pacific lines re-inaugurated for the first time since May, the first two weeks of September are expected to produce record traffic throughout Oregon and other parts of the northwest, according to predictions today.

Fred A. Smith, agent for Southern Pacific here, who announced plans for the new "Dollar Day" venture over the Labor Day weekend, expressed opinion that the low fares will stimulate extra-ordinary travel in all sections of the state and in adjacent territory.

Cent-a-mile transportation will be offered on three dates, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 3, 4 and 5, according to the announcement. A return limit of 12 days from the first date of sale—midnight of September 14—will be offered, he declared.

As in the instances of earlier "Dollar Day" sales conducted by Southern Pacific, tickets sold under the plan will be good on all trains, coach or Pullman, operated by Southern Pacific company on its lines from Portland to El Paso and from San Francisco to Ogden, including Salt Lake City.

Roundtrip tickets are sold on the basis the three-fifths the cost of the usual one-way fare, the transportation "bargain" being the outstanding event of its kind in American railroading.

The 12-day return limit on tickets is expected to be of unusual value to late vacationers throughout Oregon and other parts of the Northwest.

The sale dates for the forthcoming event have been placed just prior to the Labor day week-end in order to convenience travelers in all sections of the state.

TO CRITICS

By Walter Learned
When I was seventeen I heard
From each censorious tongue,
"I'd not do that if I were you;
You see you're rather young."
Now that I number forty years,
I'm quite as often told
Of this or that I shouldn't do
Because I'm quite too old
O carping world! If there's an age
Where youth and manhood keep
An equal poise, alas! I must
Have passed it in my sleep.

MAIN STREET LOOKS AT BROADWAY

BY ERNEST CAMP JR

Street Comedians
Many of the sandwich men along Broadway add a touch of comedy to their advertising stunts. One of the best is a young fellow on stilts, whose silk hat is twelve feet in the clouds.

He always has a crowd watching him and reading the ad he carries. The other day I saw him cross Thirty-fifth street against traffic. Nearly over, he tripped. He just caught himself, but he made the crowd gasp.

What! Again!
I saw him again today. He was crossing Fortleth street against traffic. Nearly over, he tripped. He just caught himself. Just then I caught his eye and winked at him. He merely grinned. It was an admission that it was a stunt, and a mighty good one. One that hardened New Yorkers eat up.

A Faded Flower
Years ago a certain pretty girl was the toast of Broadway. She was a reigning beauty on the stage.

The other day I passed a hair-dresser on Fifth Avenue. In a frame were pictures of women who had dyed their grey hair, with their testimonial letters. Her picture, as beautiful as ever, was in the center of the lay-out.

Just one more of the many heart-twinges that come at nearly every corner in this big town.

A Tip on Eating
Rural visitors to this city need not fear being forced to pay out too much for eating. One can get meals from thirty cents up.

All restaurants carry cards on their windows showing their prices and people see, if they don't know the place, stop and read the bill before entering. It tells them exactly how much they can get out for.

Chain Restaurants
There are about a dozen chains of restaurants in New York, all with the same varying scale of prices. When you have eaten in one you know what it costs to eat in any of them. Lots of people just pick out one of the cabins and stick to it. It saves the risk of being charged too much.

One of the chains has set a flat charge of sixty cents for "all you can eat." And they mean it. You can have five portions of ice cream. Two orders of roast beef and so on. No limit.

One manager told me few people took advantage of the special price. Only a few, and they got ashamed of themselves after about two trips and order only a little more than normally.

The restaurants explain that they are only passing on the lowered prices of foodstuffs to their customers.

Pocket Money

Few millionaires carry much cash in their pockets these days. Hold-up men know this and never bother them, except when they are returning with their womenfolk from the opera or theatre. Then they can be sure of a haul in jewelry.

One millionaire told me it was a general custom with all rich men. They are so well known all over town that they have no trouble cashing checks for enough to pay their dinner check. All they need is enough money to tip door-openers and hat-check girls with, less than $5 in silver. Waiter's tips are marked on the dinner check.

The average wealthy men can go a week in this city on $10 in currency in his pockets. It's only the newly rich, gamblers and politicians who carry around rolls of bills big enough to choke a horse.

Many Contests Awarded

Contract awards for public and semi-public construction since December 1, 1930, have passed the $2,000,000,000 mark. This amount is fully fifty per cent in excess of the normal and that excess of a billion dollars measures the value to the men who have been employed on these works of the direct personal influence of President Hoover in his efforts to relieve unemployment.

Douglas Lambs Top Market

Roseburg—A shipment of 296 lambs from the Glde and Dixonville sections of Douglas county recently topped the San Francisco market at $6.25 per hundredweight, reports J. C. Leedy, county agent, who acts as secretary for the Douglas County Livestock Growers association. After deducting shrinkage and shipping costs, growers having lambs in the shipment received $5.11 per hundredweight.

Invest in U. S.

European investors have been buying American securities at the rate of $50,000,000 a month for the past year. Which demonstrates two important things: That Europe is not entirely broke; and that at present prices American securities look good to detached observers who never invest without expecting to get their money back with interest.

What Editors Say:

ANOTHER SALARY RISE.

(Cottage Grove Sentinel)
Farmers who are struggling to make ends meet and laborers who are working for half what they used to get will hardly be expected to sympathize with the state program of boosting state salaries.

A heck of a howl goes up when the legislature votes salary rises, but now we have an economy administration that is doing what the legislature in days of prosperity might not dare to do.

The Sentinel has already called attention to several salary rises. Now comes a boost for the budget director from $4,800 to $6,000.

Farmers who are selling eggs and potatoes at less than the cost of production are likely to feel that, for the present at least, the budget director could have struggled along on $400 a month, which probably was as high a wage as he ever got when he was a newspaper reporter, and who probably works half as many hours as he worked when he was a newspaper reporter.

Sam Kozor, who was budget director before he was replaced by Henry Hazen, voluntarily asked that his salary be cut from $6,000 to $4,800, largely on the grounds that the job requires only about half time except preceding and during legislative sessions. It would seem that no one is better qualified for the job than Sam Kozor, who was in the secretary of state's office for many years. Certainly the present director can not be expected to do a better job than Sam would have done, for he had no previous experience whatever to qualify him for the job.

This writer likes Henry Hazen. Henry is a first class newspaper man, but we can't see how the governor is going to justify paying an inexperienced man $6,000 a year when an experienced man was willing to work for $4,800.

This writer fails to see how the boosting of this particular salary fits in in any way with the efficiency and economy program on which the governor was selected. The new director can hardly be as efficient as the one who was displaced, and the one displaced was willing to work for the salary provided by the legislature.

Of course Director Hazen is also one of the chief advisers to the governor, and in that capacity he may be worth the extra $1,200, probably is worth that much or more, but expenditures for gubernatorial advisers should come out of direct appropriations for conduct of the governor's office.

Not only that, but it is this writer's recollection that the legislature allowed only $4,800 for salary of the budget director. It would be interesting to know how the chief executive is going to set aside the intent of the legislature.

Interest in crochet lace has been revived by French dressmakers as a dress trimming. It is even used to trim some of the new linen hats for resort wear.

The sketch shows how a simple sort of crocheted lace may be used to trim a tunic for summer.

You begin with a chain of eight. Then taking a stitch back in the fifth stitch in the chain, then take three more chain stitches, turn and put the thread over the needle twice then take a stitch through the loop made in the initial chain, pull the thread through, take a stitch through that loop and one thread on the needle, put the thread over the needle and through the second loop on the needle and then put the thread over the needle and pull through the last loop on the needle. This is the regular double crochet stitch. This makes the first of the five spokes that go down to the loop on the original chain. Now take two plain chain stitches, make a second stroke into the loop, take two chain stitches, etc., until you have the five spokes as shown in the sketch.

Take one chain stitch and a second through the third stitch on your original chain to close your semi-circle. Turn, and crochet around the semi-circle, taking picot stitches between each two spokes. Take three chain stitches and begin again on your second scallop or semi-circle, attaching the first picot of each scallop to the last picot of the preceding scallop. When you have made as much lace as you wish in one piece, go along the base of the entire length of lace with a series of single stitches.

Control Root Borers

Dallas—L. E. Viers is firmly convinced of the value of applying paradichlorobenzene for the control of prune root borers. In August, 1929, Mr. Viers, following the recommendations of County Agent J. R. Beck, treated all but 27 rows of his 25-acre orchard. A recent examination showed green, vigorous trees, producing a good crop and with practically no borers present in the treated rows, while the untreated trees had a decided yellow color and a light crop of prunes, most of which were falling. There were three or more borers to each tree.

PREPARE CHILD FOR SCHOOL PHYSICALLY

Parents look forward with pride to the day when their child first starts to school. To the child the pride is even greater. It is to him the day when he becomes a big boy with the honor and prestige to which he has long been looking forward. A new and wide world is opened to him the day he enters school. He has to adjust himself mentally and physically to the new atmosphere into which he has been introduced. For all this, and to insure a reasonable program at school, the child must be as free as possible from personal handicaps.

Have the parents given the child a clean slate? Is the child physically prepared to go to school? Is the child going to be under a handicap through some defect in teeth, in eyesight, in hearing, in breathing, or in some other way? While life in school can hardly be compared to a race, yet the child should not enter it until freed of all unnecessary impediments and all remediable handicaps.

Very few children suffer from physical defects which cannot be corrected (most of them rather easily), but a tremendous number of children are entering school who have physical defects which have not been corrected, because their presence is not known or because they have not been considered by the parents of sufficient importance to have them corrected.

No parent can truthfully say that he or she knows all about their child unless that child has a complete physical examination of comparative recent date by a competent physician. A health examination is a thorough physical and mental appraisal of an individual by a competent physician for the purpose of detecting mental and physical impairments and faulty habits of living. This examination may result in the discovery of these defects at a time when the signs and symptoms of them are yet vague and even absent. The object of the health examination is to keep you well. It is obviously easier, safer, cheaper, more certain and more comfortable, as well as more convenient and more efficient to keep well than it is to get sick, and then try to get well. It is probably safe to say that if every child had an annual complete physical examination, with the proper action taken on the advice given, many happy years would be added to the average length of life. It is a fact that nearly all of the diseases responsible for disability and death during childhood and early adult life can either be cured or arrested if discovered early. It follows that a physical examination while good for children is equally important for the parents. Too many parents are inclined to believe that if they have the beginning of a serious illness they would rather not know about it until it becomes so serious as to cause subjective symptoms. They do not realize the good results of early treatment and the very disastrous results of late treatment. Keeping well is always better than getting well.—State Board of Health.

NEED TO PROTECT CHILDREN FROM T. B.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 25—(Special)—Further indications of the need for the protection of young children against infection with tuberculosis by their parents and others is given in figures released by the Oregon Tuberculosis association which show that during the past three biennial periods, 335 housewives and housekeepers have been treated for the disease at the state tuberculosis hospitals. School teachers numbered 17.

"These figures are taken from the last three biennial reports of the state board of control, and show that in addition to the above, 93 farmers and 145 laborers received treatment at these institutions.

"But the 188 patients classified as students, most of them in their teens and under, have not been in all the highways and byways of life. They have chiefly been at home, spending many hours in school as well. Their infection was, therefore, most likely received from active cases at home."

"The employment of school and county nurse and physicians in sufficient number to give every child a thorough physical examination at least once during the coming school year was urged upon school boards and county courts by the association as a means of maintaining the health of the entire state at a high level. "This is particularly necessary during times like the present when sickness becomes such a financial drain upon a family. Everyone knows that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure and this is particularly true where communicable diseases are concerned."
