M. Morse in Office That Curtailment Necessary

Eight men employed in road and bridge surveying at the office of the county engineer suspended work last week and it is not known when they will be employed again The uncertainty as to what the ounty road program will be for the coming winter led to this decison, according to P. M. Morse, coun ty engineer, who says that in his 14 years as county engineer in Lane his is the first time that the staff has been cut down.

In the past the surveyors worked through the winter months laying out routes for roads contemplated for the next year. Under present conditions it is not definitely known low much money will be available for road work next year in the

Last winter the county spent ap proximately $13,000 for emergency employment to aid the jobless and this had cut into the amount of funds now available for road work.
