

SCHOOL AFFAIRS STILL UNSETTLED

District 17 Again to the Fore as Children Are Said Not to Be in School

LAW TO TAKE ACTION

Eight or Nine Pupils Held to Be Absent from Classes Now, is Report

Affairs in school district 17 which several weeks ago came to a peak with the withdrawal from school of practically all pupils in the district owing to the hiring of a new teacher are still in a very much unsettled condition, according to reports at the office of the county school superintendent.

There are about eight or nine children in the district who are not attending school now. It is said. Seven pupils are enrolled at the school now. Other children in the district are attending school at Junction City and Liberty district.

The county superintendent's office has given his information to the district attorney's office and Alta King, district attorney, says that complaints against the parents will be made within the next few days after the sessions of the grand jury starting today.

District Attorney King explained that delay in taking action against the parents of children not attending school as required by the state compulsory laws is due to a present heavy circuit court term and the meeting of the grand jury.

Following the controversy in school district 17 several weeks ago and the withdrawal of pupils parents were warned that their children must attend school. Many started attending school in adjacent districts but after a few weeks were withdrawn. It is said that in all cases the required tuition was not paid in the other districts.

Nothing could be simpler than this little play apron that is designed like an old-fashioned workman's apron with a tape to hold it over the head and tapes at either side to tie it securely in place.

It can be made of cretonne, of figured print, of unbleached muslin. It can be bound around the edges with tape—red, if it is made of unbleached muslin, of the color of the figure if it is made of a print.

Any apron will do, of course. For the important thing about this one is the little pocket—big for a pocket—to hold some sort of plaything.

The apron can be devised as a painting apron, and then will serve the double purpose of keeping the frock beneath it clean and holding the painting equipment. The pocket may be square or oblong, and it may be stitched into several compartments—one for the paintbox, another for pencils and brushes.

Or it can be an apron devised for the small sculptor. That waxy kind of modeling clay that children love to work with can be packed, in its box, into the pocket, and the little knives or spatulas they work it with can be put in it, too.

Or a sewing apron, in which even a little folding sewing case may be tucked into the pocket—a case containing needles and pins and little reels of thread. With scissors in a little stitched compartment at the side, attached by a tape so they won't get lost.

INSULATION BOOKLET HAS FARMERS' INTEREST

New Commerce Bulletin for Fall Building Operations Recommended by Engineer

M. C. Betts of the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., prominent in the field of agricultural engineering, believes that the farmer of the country who are contemplating fall building or reconditioning operations will find much useful information in a new bulletin on insulating materials just issued by the national committee on wood utilization of the department of commerce.

"House Insulation: Its Economics and Applications" is the title of the publication which was compiled under the guidance of a subcommittee of 12 nationally recognized building and housing authorities. Mr. Betts, representing the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, is a member of the group. The bulletin was prepared with the consumer's interest foremost in mind and is non-technical in its treatment of the subject of insulation in building and construction.

"The farmer's share of the country's annual building and construction budget is large," Mr. Betts said, "and millions of dollars go into farm buildings. The farmer naturally is interested in making his dollars count. This new bulletin should help him, for it explains the proper uses and correct application of insulating materials to protect houses and buildings of all kinds from extreme changes in temperature, thereby minimizing the need for excessive firing of the heating plant in the winter and making the structure more comfortable in the summer."

Under such optical headings as "History and Uses of Insulation," "Types of Insulation," "Insulation of Walls and Rooms," "Methods of Applying Insulating Materials," "Insulation for the House Already Built," and "Cost of Insulating," the bulletin gives the reader an excellent basis on which to determine whether or not he wants to use insulation, and if so, how it should be used and applied in order to assure satisfactory results.

"House Insulation: Its Economics and Application" may be obtained from the Portland District Office of the Department of Commerce, at 215 New Postoffice building, Portland, Oregon. The bulletin sells for 10 cents a single copy.

REPORT OF MEN ON JOB IS MADE

State Has 50 on Payroll Here Now on Emergency Work; Wage Rate $3 Daily

26 AT WORK FOR COUNTY

City Calls for 25 Last Week; Demand is Met Through Red Cross Office

About 50 men are now employed on state emergency road construction in Lane county. Just recently a crew of 63 men were engaged in this special work which pays three dollars per day with the men alternating so that they will be employed at least one-half time.

The county last week had 26 men employed on emergency road work and 25 men were employed by the city on special work to provide as many jobs as possible. The county rate of pay is two dollars a day.

Men seeking emergency work are registered at the Red Cross office. When jobs are available the state, county and city ask the Red Cross office to send the men listed.

Judge C. P. Barnard of the county court says that plans are shaping well so that every possible emergency job will be made available for the winter.

horse. They are all regular entries.

Mr. Roosevelt is clearly the leading contender at the present writing, the wisecracker admit, although they hint that he has shot his bolt already by having the spotlight centered on him so powerfully and long, ahead of the actual campaigning. He is committed to public ownership of public utilities, although not in a radical way, will probably favor the wets, if elected and is known as a fearless, able and honest man. In addition he carries the prestige of an honored name. His main weakness is that Tammany helped to elect him governor of his state and his main strength is that he has dared to challenge the wishes of the Union Square Tiger.

Newton D. Baker, who has been back peddling on his boom for the nomination, is easily the most powerful rival of Roosevelt. If he would come out openly and campaign there is no telling how strong he would grow. The American Legion is strongly for him because of his support of the A. E. F. at a time when the politicians were trying to run the war instead of letting the general staff do it. He has a long record of accomplishment without a single blot to mar his slate. If he will announce his candidacy, politicians agree that he will pass Roosevelt as the leading candidate.

"Al" Smith is generally considered the most popular man, personally, in the whole Democratic party and will have a powerful voice when it comes to naming the next candidate. His chances are not considered great, the same causes that militated against his election in the last race being the ones used to frown on his being named the standard-bearer. His political record is one of the best ever established by any politician in the history of the country and he is known to be a man who gets things done.

Governor Ritchie is popular in his own state and a fine candidate with whom to attract the women's vote. He is one of the most willing candidates but is classed as a possibility only in case of a deadlock. Ex-Governor Byrd, across the Potomac from Ritchie, ranks about on even terms with his neighbor, except that he is stronger with the "solid South."

Owen D. Young passes all tests and his main handicap is that he is felt to be tied up with Wall Street too strongly to be a popular candidate in agrarian districts. Melvin Traylor has all Young's good points and in addition is known to favor the "common people" in financial matters. His birth in Kentucky, early manhood in Texas and business career in Chicago will win him millions of votes, if chosen.

Senator Lewis is another with a fine geographical background. Born in Virginia, a lumberyard worker in the state of Washington and congressman from that state years ago, he is now an Illinois senator. Added to that, he is sincerely admired by millions of voters of foreign blood whose various languages he speaks fluently.

Last on the list is Senator Reed. He is a man of power, and his weakness is his refusal to abide strictly by party tenets. He belongs to the old school of spellbinders and is a most picturesque character.
