HAM AND EGGS DE LUXE

Up-county people who demand ham and eggs in the true American way can get them at the swanky Waldorf-Astoria, the new $20,000,000 hotel, in exactly the same form that Cal Coolidge gets his up in his Vermont home. In other words a real farmer's wife will cook it on the gold-plated range at the 47-story hostelry.

About ten American women will cater to the tastes of American-born palates. Not all of them are Yankees either, as a couple of colored mammals have been hired to jiggle corn pone and possum for visiting Southerners.

The only thing the average American will not be able to recognize from his food his mother used to serve will be the price. We haven't learned that yet and will wait for somebody else to tell us. We suspect it will be about $2.50 for "ham and—". Yes, one order.

HOT RIDING

Now summer is over, city workers will have a rest from the daily roasting they had to endure going to work and returning on the subway. Most visitors expect the subway to be cool on hot days, but, on the contrary, it is as hot as a boiler room.

In winter it is just about as cold as the open street. Windows on the trains are always left open to allow the smells to escape. In one car alone there may be twenty or more different nationalities and nearly all of them have their own cookery. One can detect the odor of limburger, garlic, and a thousand other fragrances that appeal alone to the here go out in the country for the sole purpose of catching hay fever which destroys their sense of smell. Mebbe so?

TRICK NOVELTIES

There's a certain German shop in the West Forties that sells the most curious things in the world. They make suitable presents for anybody. One is a water pitcher that plays tunes when you pick it up. The same idea is applied to cigarette boxes, perfume bottles and other knickknacks.

At the same place one can buy music boxes, walking and talking dolls, trick canes and a host of mechanical toys that children go wild over. And prices are more than reasonable, a $5 bill being enough to supply the whole family with desirable gifts they never heard of before.

SOME HIGH PRICES

Restaurants here that have a millionaire following do not hesitate to charge plenty. One place gets seventy-five cents for a baked potato. Another charges $4.50 for fillet-mignon—better known in Jefferson, Ia., as tenderloin steak.

One promoter entertained his prospects recently at a big hotel with a banquet that cost him exactly $30 a person—and he didn't give away any gold cigarette lighters either. He was "in" with the hotel certain people who perpetrate it. They do say that some people

Hints for the Home

With Strawberry Jam

You can add interest to many a dessert with a jar of strawberry jam.

Floating Island, for instance. Fish out a strawberry, soft and sweet, from the jam to place in the center of each island.

Rice pudding: put a spoon of strawberry jam on each serving of the pudding.

Bread pudding: spread the pudding with strawberry jam, add a meringue, brown in the oven, and serve hot or cold.

Cream cheese: make a delicious dessert of it by serving it with crisp crackers and strawberry jam.

Any other sort of jam will do, of course, but strawberry seems to fit in so far as flavor is concerned with all these desserts.

Oh—you can gild fine gold and paint the lily by adding a dab of strawberry jam to each glass dessert dish of home-made vanilla ice cream.

It's good. "Yum-yum," the children say about it.

Fried Oysters

Drain, clean and dry the oysters. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper, dip in flour, egg and cracker or stale bread crumbs, and fry in deep fat. Drain on brown paper. Serve on a hot folded napkin, garnish with parsley and lemon. Fried oysters should be served immediately. It is better not to begin frying until they are wanted than to delay serving.

Rice Au Gratin

1 cup minced onion
1 clove of garlic, minced
2-3 cups chopped green pepper (no seeds)
2 cups canned tomatoes
3-4 cup rice
1 tablespoon minced parsley
2 tablespoons butter
3-4 cup grated American cheese.
Salt and pepper.

Wash rice and parboil in boiling salted water for 5 minutes, drain. Melt butter, add onion, garlic and green pepper and sauté until tender without browning. Add tomatoes and when boiling stir in the parboiled rice and simmer until rice is tender, adding salt to taste when half done. Turn into buttered baking dish and cover top with cheese. Brown in moderate oven. Sprinkle with parsley and serve at once.

Broiled Oysters

Take two dozen large oysters, cleaned, drained and dried in a soft cloth. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Melt two ounces butter in a large frying pan, lay in one dozen, as soon as the last one is in, turn the first one and when all have been turned begin taking out; lay them then closely on a large buttered oyster broiler; cook to a light brown over moderate fire. While these are broiling the other dozen may be "set" in the butter. Have six rounds of toast on a hot platter; put four oysters on each, sprinkle on the butter in which they were stiffened and serve with lemon cut in eighths.
