OREGON BOY WINS

Walter Jaeger, 4-H club boy of Clackamas county, who, after taking first place in the western division of the Wilson Meat Animal Livestock club contest, placed second nationally, winning a $200 scholarship to Oregon State college.

OREGON CLUB MEMBERS WIN NATIONAL HONORS

Four Oregon club boys won national honors for themselves and their state recently when they were named among the 15 clubbers in the 11 western states to receive $500 scholarships in the International Harvester company contest.

The Oregon winners and their club projects are John H. Welbes of Portland, swine; Clifford Conrad, Imbler, swine; Stanley Green, Stanfield, sheep; and Randall Grimes, Harrisburg, dairy cattle. In addition three alternates were chosen, as follows: Kenneth Dahl, Silverton; Cal Monroe, Canby; and Barbara Dunn, Junction City.

These scholarships, which entitle each winner to $500 toward a course at the state agricultural college, are provided through a $50,000 fund set aside for the purpose by the International Harvester company as a memorial to Cyrus Hall McCormick, a Virginia farm boy who gave the world its first successful grain reaper in 1831. The fund was divided into 100 scholarships of $500 each, and apportioned on a basis of club enrollments as follows: Western states, 15; eastern states, 10; southern states, 25; and central states, 40. With Oregon boys winning four, the remainder of the 15 allotted to the western states were distributed three to Colorado; two each to California and Washington, and one each to Idaho, Wyoming, New Mexico and Montana.

The winners were selected by a committee of civic and business leaders of the country, headed by Arthur M. Hyde, secretary of the U. S. department of agriculture. The contest was conducted by the National Committee on Boys' and Girls' 4-H club work.

Dental Science Advances

This is the sixth of a series of articles on Orthodontia to acquaint the public with this particular branch of dentistry and its possibilities.

By DR. J. E. RICHMOND

Having established the fact that teeth may be moved by the mechanical stimulation of appliances probably the first question that comes to the mind of the reader is, "why do teeth get into positions that are abnormal so that they need to be moved?"

There are a large number of causes for crowded and irregular teeth. Some are rather obscure and not yet entirely convicted of causing the conditions for which they are blamed while others are so definitely connected with certain malocclusions that there seems to be no doubt of their effect.

While trying to avoid all technical and professional terms this one "malocclusion" is almost unavoidable in any article on Orthodontia so it may be well to define it. "Occlusion" is a word used to signify the manner in which the upper teeth strike the lowers in eating. When the teeth come together in the manner that nature intended they have the greatest mechanical advantage and show the most beautiful arrangement. This is called a normal occlusion. Any deviation from this is called a malocclusion; in other words a bad or faulty occlusion.

It is highly important that the cause of each case of malocclusion be determined because, if that cause still remains after the teeth have been put in their proper positions, they will soon relapse into their old positions when the appliances are removed.

One of the most prevalent causes of bunched and crowded teeth is arrested development. What causes development to stop before it is complete is still a matter of discussion among Orthodontists but the fact is recognized by them all that in many cases the width development of the jaws stops early in life and is not again started up by natural means alone in spite of the fact that the child may continue to develop in other ways in a perfectly normal manner.

Arrested development of the jaws is probably the earliest recognizable condition indicating that treatment will be needed. Moreover it is so definite in its appearance that any layman can diagnose it once he knows the landmarks. At the age of six years the temporary teeth of a child should show very definite growth spaces between those in front and, if one looks at the teeth of a child of this age and finds them in contact with each other, he may definitely predict that the permanent teeth will be crowded when they erupt. "Believe it or not," as our friend Ripley says, a child's jaw is developed to its full width (in the region occupied by the ten front teeth) at the age of six or it never will be developed without artificial stimulation.

"As soon as I saw you turn that corner," said the traffic cop, stopping a lady motorist. "I said to myself, 'Forty-five at least.'"

"Oh, no, officer," she replied indignantly. "It's just this hat that makes me look so old."—Printalk.

Even in Those Good Old Days - -

People took pride in the outward appearance of their travel conveyances. Plush lined carriages were always well painted, clean and drawn by sleek horses.

People today, who care, keep their automobiles nicely painted and in first class shape. It saves them money.

It also pays to keep the top repaired, the wheels painted and the broken glass replaced.
